After December 1, 2004, re-applying is necessary.
I recently attended a wedding where, because of the groom’s lofty political connections, the bride’s family appeared to be treated with an astonishing amount of insensitivity and disdain. Do we really live in an era when graciousness to strangers, not to mention plain old good manners, no longer counts for much? Most interesting for me, as one of the bride’s relatives, was how much the wedding seemed like some of the first specialties I attended. Back then I remember sometimes feeling so “small,” like all the “important” people were looking right through me. Of course that probably wasn’t real. No one was “actively ignoring” me; they were just busy with their own friends and their own dogs. Even so, I will always remember and always be grateful to the old hands who took a moment to reach out and introduce themselves to a very young, very shy “newbie.”

The number one complaint I hear from Lhasa fanciers these days is the lack of newcomers to our breed. Is it because the newcomers aren’t there or is it because all of us old-timers don’t “see” them? With our own annual “family gathering,” the National Specialty, fast approaching, let’s make an effort to reach out to the new, enthusiastic Lhasa fanciers, both young and old, who will be joining us in St. Louis. They are truly the “VIP’s” of our event because they are the future of our breed.

Along the same vein, our “family” will not attract newcomers if we aren’t treating each other with respect and sensitivity. A breed where fanciers are at constant war with each other may make for juicy gossip and the occasional adrenalin rush of outrage, but it won’t be very appealing to the many folks who love their dogs, love the breed and simply want to enjoy our sport.

Just because we live in a society that forgives coarseness doesn’t mean that we can’t all exercise some free will and rise above the tide of crudeness that surrounds us. The Golden Rule should apply at least double in the dog world. Many thanks to the hard-working members of the show committee who are putting the final touches on our 51st National Specialty. And...as always...THANKS TO ALL FOR ALL YOU DO!

Leslie Baumann

In Memoriam:
With great sadness, I learned of the sudden passing of Susan Jordan. Many of us met Susan at the National Specialty in Wisconsin where her beloved Spencer was chosen as Reserve Winners Dog. She was also active with ALAC Rescue and known for her ability to rehabilitate problem dogs.

Also, I learned that Gail Noblissa passed away on April 24th. She was one of our members in the far away state of Hawaii who was very active in the 70’s and 80’s.

Thanks to Darby McSorley for alerting the Lhasa world of the passing of one of the great ones: Bea Loob. Bea’s Zijuh Lhasa Apsos breeding program was well-known and well-respected in the fifties and sixties. I daresay there are few ALAC members who can’t trace their pedigrees back to at least one dog that she bred.

This is a picture from four years ago. Lefty was entered as a Veteran at an upcoming specialty. So I dusted him off and put him in as a special at a local show for some practice.

It was a thrill that he did so well in regular competition.

Thank you Mrs. Hogg for the comment on Lefty’s “smoooooth movement”.

Lefty is still producing well at 12 years of age.

ACCIDENTS CAN HAPPEN

By Marilyn M. Miller

My oldest friend that I have known since fifth grade in West Hartford, Connecticut called me last night to say that her Champion Irish Water Spaniel McGee had his tail caught in their back door. Fortunately the tail was not severed. However, the vet bill for x-rays, stitches, etc came to 600 dollars. The dog now has to wear an Elizabethan collar for several days so he does not lick the stitches. This dog has been shown at Westminster. My friend is a very competent dog owner, but accidents can happen.

My first two Lhasa Apsos (Ping and Pong) got out of our backyard many years ago because a workman did not close the gate correctly. The two dogs bounced against the gate, opened it, and off they were. I ran out of the house in my slippers telling everyone to look for two Lhasa Apsos. My Husband, Glenn, took off in the car and fortunately found them at Louis Lake in Winthrop. My two dogs were "investigating" a German Shepherd.

Tingri Nor slipped her collar one day by the firehouse in Winthrop, but she found her way home and was waiting for me on our front steps. I was really lucky. Accidents do happen.

Sometimes the leash comes off the collar, just because the leash comes off. I like a big clip on the collar even for my small dogs; however, these can come off also. Maybe the leash clip pulls against the ring on the collar at just the right point that puts enough pressure against both and the leash comes off. This has happened to me a few times. Fortunately not many. It happened to me and Luckee last week. He was not even pulling me on the leash and it came attached. Fortunately he came to me when I called him. We were not on a busy street and we were close to home which helped. If we were near traffic such on Shore Drive, he could have been frightened and run out into the street. My Husband, Glenn, says this is nonsense, however, he does not walk the dogs, so it has never happened to him. Our former obedience trainer, who is now a judge for obedience, Donna Mead, says "Yes this can happen" and it has happened to her with her large dogs. Accidents can happen.

The best thing you can do is to train your dog to come when called, in case this type of thing happens. I had better start training Dillon to do the same. Have a tattoo or micro chip put on your dog. Neither procedure is painful to the dog. We have seen both done on our dogs. That way if they are lost or stolen, there is some proof of their identity and who the owners are.

As far as accidents go, you cannot watch your dog every second, especially if you have more than one. Our puppy, Dillon, found a dry wall screw in our backyard several months ago, and was happily chewing on it when I saw him. We had not been using any so it must have been thrown over the fence by one of the workman who was working on the burned out house next door to us. If he had swallowed the screw it might have killed him, or at least cost us a fortune in vet bills. Last week I caught him munching on a pebble in our backyard. I picked him up, opened his mouth and took it out.

We try to keep the backstairs cleared, or at least put salt on them in the winter. With the short legs our dogs have, I do not want to have any broken legs. When Glenn or I go down in the basement we try to remember to close that door. Our dogs know that is where their food is kept and they know there is probably some kibble dropped on the floor when we refill their upstairs containers.

Accidents do happen. We do the best we can to take care of our dogs. I would never consider taking one off leash for a walk. People have their dogs off leash all the time on Shore Drive. I would never deliberately risk the life of one of my dogs by doing this, no matter how well trained and how many obedience titles they have. I try to remember to close our back door carefully, because it really slams shut hard, and I do not want to lose one of my Lhasa's tails in it. I have to remember to keep my hand on the door when I let them in, and not to let it slam shut. I told my friend in Connecticut, not to blame herself for McGee's tail being damaged, but accidents do happen.

Breeding Notes
How to breed healthy sound dogs? Much recent attention has been focussed on theoretical concepts like COI. (Coefficient of inbreeding). Breeders are beset with the problem of reconciling the intuitive truth of the dangers of loss of genetic diversity with the practice of selective linebreeding which has, in many respects, served them well. Of less importance than line breeding vs. outcross breeding is the difference between stupid breeding and intelligent breeding. Outcrossing the wrong two dogs can be much more of a disaster than line breeding the right ones. I have seen this in operation for many years, and would like to offer some of my personal thoughts on good breeding practices.

1. Research.
Know what problems potentially exist in any dog you are thinking of breeding. First, get all the information available on the modes of inheritance of all the defects known in your breed. Then comes the hard part. Though outcrossing is a great idea theoretically, in practice it is a field full of landmines. Within your own line, you are pretty sure what is there and what isn’t - especially after many years. But when you outcross, do you know what you are getting? Has the breeder of that dog been completely candid? Does he/she even know what problems lurk in his/her dog’s genes? What of the unexpected effects of combining two deleterious factors, each rather benign in themselves? For example: if a disease in Lhasa Apsos were the result of mutations at two separate loci, each of these genes alone seems incapable of producing the disease. Line bred dogs, having only one of these mutant genes would be healthy. But outcross them, to a line which harbors the other gene, and disaster strikes! - Whole litters of pups sick and dying in adolescence or early adulthood.

2. The use of pedigrees.
I know of breeders who use pedigrees to choose their breedings without regard to the animals. These “breeders” look to “concentrate the blood” of a famous animal, and will send a bitch to a stud without ever seeing or laying hands on him just to concentrate the blood. This is a disaster waiting to happen - the unholy combination of stupidity and inbreeding! The pedigree is only useful as a map of the probability that your litter will avoid certain problems and succeed in having some other qualities you want. Its usefulness is entirely dependant on what you know about each and every animal on it. To me the COI is of very secondary importance to what I know about the five generations of ancestors in front of me. If all these dogs are trash, the smallest COI in the world won’t make a healthy and sound pup. And if all the ancestors are sound and healthy, the chances are good that the get will also be, despite a fairly high COI.

3. How to inbreed.
You inbreed when you need to “fix” a quality, not just for the hell of it. Suppose I have poor quality coats in my line. Suddenly I come up with a litter which exhibits exceptional coat quality. I don’t know where it came from, but I know I want to keep it. I will inbreed on those animals, and I will fix that coat. But how? First of all, I will try to get two rather different looking individuals who have as little as possible phenotypically in common, - except for the coat of course. Why? Because I want to preserve what diversity I can see while inbreeding on the selected quality.

4. How to outcross.
First of all, know exactly why you are doing this particular outcross. Let’s say I need better angulated rears. I have several lines to choose from, each with the rears I want. All of these lines are remote in ancestry from my dogs. How do I decide (after the normal research on health and inherited defects) which to use. This is very simple: I use assortative phenotypic mating. The dog that looks most like my line will give me the rear plus genetic diversity, but likely will not change my type. This last is important, not only for vanity’s sake, but because if I don’t like any of these pups, then I won’t keep any, and then what’s the use of having done the breeding.

5. What to select.
This last is the most important. When you have done your outcross, and you have your litter in front of you. What then? All too often, breeders forget why they did the breeding in the first place. They breed for a better head, because their dogs have poor heads. Then they see the litter, and their eye is captured by a pup with a wonderful style and the same old head as usual. They end up selling the good headed pups as pets, and keeping what they already have - perhaps because it is familiar. I always write a contract with myself on the reasons for doing a particular breeding. Then when it comes time to select, I read my contract and make my choice accordingly.

In summary, research everything you can, use your pedigree intelligently, inbreed complementarily, outcross assortatively and select honestly. Use the COI as a commentary not as a commandment.
OK'ES Eye of the Storm & Lois DeMers stormed into Conroe, TX Sunday and blew away the competition. With his tail held high and Lois by his side, Norm got his second 4 point major and became our newest champion. Thank you Judges for awarding his quality.

Most of all, THANK YOU Lois deMers for your good care and expert handling. Norm is now home and available to approved bitches.

Watch for our gal, Whitehouse Hail to the Chief, who is on the hunt for her last 4 singles. Coming to a ring near you is OK'ES Slippery When Wet.

Lhasa Apso Breed Standard

Character
Gay and assertive, but chary of strangers.

Size
Variable, but about 10 inches or 11 inches at shoulder for dogs, bitches slightly smaller.

Color
All colors equally acceptable with or without dark tips to ears and beard.

Body Shape
The length from point of shoulders to point of buttocks longer than height at withers, well ribbed up, strong loin, well-developed quarters and thighs.

Coat
Heavy, straight, hard, not woolly nor silky, of good length, and very dense.

Mouth and Muzzle
The preferred bite is either level or slightly undershot. Muzzle of medium length; a square muzzle is objectionable.

Head
Heavy head furnishings with good fall over eyes, good whiskers and beard; skull narrow, falling away behind the eyes in a marked degree, not quite flat, but not domed or apple-shaped; straight foreface of fair length. Nose black, the length from tip of nose to eye to be roughly about one-third of the total length from nose to back of skull.

Eyes
Dark brown, neither very large and full, nor very small and sunk.

Ears
Pendant, heavily feathered.

Legs
Forelegs straight; both forelegs and hind legs heavily furnished with hair.

Feet
Well feathered, should be round and catlike, with good pads.

Tail and Carriage
Well feathered, should be carried well over back in a screw; there may be a kink at the end. A low carriage of stern is a serious fault.
