Petland and the AKC

There are tremendous changes taking place in the world of dogs right now. These changes will have a longterm impact on our sport as well as on responsible breeders of purebred dogs and on this club. Last year, we were confronted with the issue of PAWS and wrestled with the many arguments about what sort of impact that legislation would have on the future of the purebred dogs. Now, I just received news from the recent AKC Delegates Meeting where it was announced that the AKC Board voted 12 to 1 to enter into a contract with Petland to register puppies online at their stores at the time the puppies are sold to their new owners. In the vigorous debate that followed this announcement, it became clear that the rationale for this decision is not only that registrations are declining but also that entering into contracts such as this is how the Board plans to recover the $10 million a year that the AKC loses on companion and performance events. Is this truly how we want to subsidize our sport?

Our beloved breed has been exploited for far too long by pet stores and puppy mills. The sad results of this exploitation show up every day in shelters and rescue all over the country. Poorly bred, sickly and bad tempered puppy mill Lhasas give our breed a bad name at groomers and at veterinarians. While the AKC pays lip service to “responsible breeding,” the Petland contract seems to put the organization into the hip pocket of precisely the same “puppy manufacturers” who take no responsibility for giving purebred dogs a bad name. What this means for the future of our breed...of all breeds...and the future of our members will be a big topic of discussion in the month’s ahead.

What should ALAC do?

While our club has only one vote out of 400 plus AKC member clubs, based on the uproar at the Delegates Meeting that followed this announcement, we are not alone in our discomfort with the direction that the AKC is heading. What do you think ALAC should do about this turn of events? Sure, we can write a letter to the AKC Board. We can support a slate of delegates running for the Board who promise to protect the highest ideals of the sport of purebred dogs rather than catering to the lowest common denominator. But is there anything else that we can do to protect our sport and our breed?

Beyond this immediate issue, all ALAC members need to start thinking about the future. What should the world of purebred dogs look like 10 years from now or 20 years from now? Sure, many of us will be retiring but what sort of sport do we want to leave to the next generation of fanciers? The AKC is developing one vision of the future. Should that be ALAC’s vision, too? We need every member to think seriously about these questions. Let the ALAC Board know what you think.

Dr. Harold Orenstein

Sadly, right before this year’s Westchester Lhasa Apso Specialty, I heard of the passing of a true gentleman in our breed, Dr. Harold Orenstein. Harold and his wife Etta have been the driving force behind the Westchester, New York club as well as two of the most gracious people I’ve ever met. Harold was approved to judge the Non-Sporting Group and breed Lhasas with his wife Etta. Our sympathies to his family and his many Lhasa Apso friends. He will be greatly missed.

I’m looking forward to seeing many of you at the Nationals in Olympia, Washington.

Thanks to all for all you do!

If Your dog is chewing at the root of his tail or licking his feet -
Then stop feeding him a dog food that causes his allergies.

The #1 allergy of dogs is soybeans (also called lecithin), #2 is wheat and #3 is corn. They may make him miserable. Solid Gold Dog Foods do not use these allergy grains. We use amaranth, millet and barley in our Hund-N-Flocken dog food. In 1975, we introduced it as the first natural dog food in the U.S.. The FDA told us that there was no such thing as a natural dog food. We told them that it had been a top seller in Germany for 20 years. Many times the German-American import dog sales contracts say that if you don’t feed the Hund-N-Flocken (means dog food flakes in German) and the Solid Gold SeaMeal, they will not guarantee the health of the dog.

Solid Gold uses no animal/poultry fat, which may be rancid fat. We use canola oil and flaxseed oils - but never sunflower oil. The Swedish Cancer Society study showed a 69% increase in the risk of cancer if sunflower, safflower or corn oils are used.

Some rancid animal/poultry fats cause diarrhea. So these companies firm up the stool, with sugar beet pulp. However, the toxic waste from fat is still being produced. These companies leave out the word sugar, so you may think they are talking about red beets. But red beets have no pulp, sugar beets do.

With a constant sugar diet, the dog may get diabetes, pancreatitis, dry coat, stones/crystals in the bladder, ear infections or a red tinge to a dark coat. The sugar may tie up the minerals in the body. This red tinge may be the first sign of anemia.

Some dogs may also eat poop. They eat it by trying to recycle the minerals that the sugar has destroyed. Use our Solid Gold S.E.P... (Stop Eating Poop) along with our SeaMeal for this disgusting habit.

But, the toxic waste from the animal/poultry still goes on. Due to gravity, the dog’s feet begin to swell and the dogs lick their feet.

When you burn your finger, you put your finger in your mouth. Your saliva is very soothing. The dog uses his saliva to lessen the pain in his feet.

When you have a headache, you massage your temples. This release the endorphins in the brain. These pleasure centers don’t permit pain to come into the body. So the motion of the tongue on the foot releases the endorphins.

Some dog food companies use chicken or duck. Solid Gold doesn’t. You really don’t believe that the pictures of those nice chicken breast are the meat that is put into your dog food, do you? Chicken breasts sell for $3.69 a pound. The federal meat inspectors inspect the poultry processing factory only once in their 16 inspection cycle. Ugh! Ever heard of the bird flu?

A television documentary about the poultry industry showed what went on in a chicken processing factory. The camera showed a poultry worker tearing apart pieces of chicken. A small flowing stream flowed near his feet. Disease parts were thrown into the slurry, as well as beak, feet and some feathers. The manure inside the intestines/guts called digest, were also thrown into the slurry. Beak and feet are called poultry by products.

A dog food company may say they use organic or human grade chicken. That may be what comes into the factory, I doubt that is what comes out the other end.

So, if your dog has skin problems, try out non-allergic Hund-N-Flocken dry dog food with lamb and fish. Our Holistique Blendz was the first holistic dog food in the U.S. in 1985. It is for sensitive stomach, seniors, white dogs and overweight dogs. We use only fish as our source of protein. We use quinoa and oats as our grains. Oils are sesame, olive and almond. Lentils are used.

Steroids are frequently given to dogs with skin problems. It only covers up the symptoms, not the cause.

Solid Gold gives you Longevity thru Prevention.

The beginning of July, I began the process of applying for my Lhasa Apso, Luckee Fella, CD, RN to become a registered Therapy Dog with Therapy Dogs, Incorporated located in Cheyenne, Wyoming. I first heard of this company through a woman in my Rally classes last Spring. Dianne and her Bichon Frise, Buttons do a lot of therapy work as Diane is a family and child therapist and takes Buttons along with her to work.

I began the process by calling this organization and leaving my mailing address, requesting information on how to have Luckee registered. I received a package in the mail a couple of weeks later.

This process was a lot more complex than when I had Jet and Lilly registered with Sally Alexander's "Pets and People" organization several years ago. Sally was on the spot to evaluate how Jet and I worked together in a group situation.

In this case there is no Tester/Evaluator in the State of New Hampshire. In order to become certified, there was a lot of paper work for me to complete. First off, I needed a cover letter telling about myself and Luckee and why we would like to become a therapy dog team. I also needed three letters of reference by people who know Luckee and me. Also, they wanted to know who had observed me handling my dog. This ruled out neighbors and most friends as they have not seen me work with Luckee. My obedience trainer and veterinarian were suggested. I did not ask my vet as we have a fairly new one. I did, however, ask my trainer, Judy Kay, to write me a letter of recommendation as well as two women who have been in my Rally classes for months. Patricia Bartlett (with her Lab Maddie) and Karen Norteman (with her Bearded Collie, Sheamus) and Judy all wrote me lovely letters which I will save forever.

In their letters of recommendation these people had to tell why they would enjoy a visit from me and my dog if they were confined to a hospital or nursing home. I did not ask the activities director at the nursing home (Geneva) where Jet and I visit on a bi-monthly basis to write as she had never met Luckee or seen us work as a team.

The Canine Good Citizen title which Luckee earned in 2001 was a plus. His Companion Dog obedience title was a huge help also as well as his Rally Novice title, however neither titles are required.

There was a Therapy Dogs Incorporated Application for me to fill out. A copy of Luckee's Rabies vaccine was required. Also a form our vet had to sign saying that Luckee had had his annual physical exam, was up to date on his Rabies shot and is current on required vaccines for our area.

There was a long questionnaire which I had to fill out regarding this organizations' visiting requirements, how to deal with certain types of situations in the facility we are visiting, and what type of items I must have with me at all times when Luckee and I are working as a team.

All of this information had to be typed, including the three letters of reference. Then a check for twenty dollars was included for one handler and one dog. Additional dogs are ten dollars more per dog.

Luckee must visit a facility at least four times a year to keep up his qualification as a Therapy Dog. He is not going to take Jet's place, but I would like to get him used to visiting gradually.

This past Tuesday I took Luckee and all this paperwork over to Geneva, the activities director at Haven Health Care Center where Jet and I visit. I had the certificate from TDInc. to show her as well as my ID card that I must carry with me on all visits and Luckee's red TDInc. tag which goes on his collar.

Luckee was a little nervous in the lobby of the health care center. I think he thought it was an enormous vet's office. We did not do any visiting that day, but I did want Geneva to meet him. I will break him in gradually and visit one or two people the first couple of visits.

Glenn said I had more paperwork to do for this certification than he has ever needed for a gun permit! Karen, who wrote a letter of recommendation said she has applied for jobs with a lot less paperwork.

Luckee and I are an official team now and will begin our visits this Fall.

MILEHAUS Lhasa Apso
How could it be I am standing inside a gompa, a real gompa? How could it be a lama’s dog, an Apso named Dewa, was waiting outside? How could it be I’m here in the rolling hillside of the Blue Ridge Mountains outside Charlottesville, Virginia?

The Gompa dogs, bred by Lama Gyen Yeshe, were imported from Nepal into Canada in the mid-eighties by Gerald D’Aoust. Curious about the dogs, I let my interest be known in the spring of 2001 after discovering the group had been in the United States for over a year, turned over to Cecile W. Glover. That led to ten Gompa dogs being delivered to my doorstep August 31, 2001. Ceese and I talked off and on during the next several years, but it was in July 2004 that Ceese, Ruth Gerath and I formed a team. Working together, we expanded Ceese’s Kennel Without Walls, establishing the Gompa Lhasa Apso Preservation Program, now a legal trust.

Although the dogs are registered with UKC, early on I explored other avenues for keeping their records and possible methods of registration. During this exploration I discovered the Society for the Perpetuation of the Desert-Bred Saluki (http://www.desertbred.org). Originally started in the seventies as simply a means of record keeping for Salukis not eligible for AKC registration, in 1988 the Society was formed, and is now an AKC recognized domestic registry. The Society’s Head Registrar guided me through set-up, helping ensure our internal registry meets stringent requirements.

After establishing the Gompa Lhasa Apso Preservation Program, we expanded that internal registry into a database, to include, along with UKC registration records, DNA profiling and microchip identification, many physical measurements (i.e., bite of jaw and bite of teeth), health characteristics, breeding priority, inbreeding coefficients (COI), coat color (birth, six months and adult), litter size and many more data. From this information we are able to generate reports, tracking the progress of our breeding approach, which is based on population genetics, diversity principles and management of small populations.

My role in the Program is Breeding Director. I plan upcoming breedings and make the decisions associated with the actual breeding program. Given that responsibility, I needed to see the rest of the dogs in order to incorporate my own experience of selective breeding into principles used in the management of small populations.

Measurements and evaluations were needed to fill out the database. The Directors also wanted to introduce the Program and other Directors to Ceese’s Kennel Without Walls people.

Ceese’s original introduction to this unique group of dogs came about during a quest to find a Lhasa Apso for her teacher, Geshe Tenzin Wangyal Rinpoche. The following spring 2000 Mr. D’Aoust could no longer care for the dogs and the group was handed over to Ceese. For a short time, the dogs lived on a farm belonging to two friends, fellow students of Lama Tenzin. Not a permanent answer, she came up with the Kennel Without Walls (KWW) concept. KWW dogs live with wonderful, caring — many very spiritual — people who agree to allow the dog to participate in the breeding program.

It was time for me to meet these people and the rest of the dogs. It was time to share the Program’s hard work with the Kennel Without Walls people. So…we had a Dog Party!

Arriving late Wednesday evening, I was met at the small Charlottesville airport by Ceese and Ruth. Within five minutes after arriving at Ceese’s house—a beautiful old stone house named Stoat Hall—Rincin and his caretaker stopped by on their way out of town. For the next three days, what seemed like a constant parade of people and dogs flowed in and out of Stoat Hall. People drove from near and far. Some dogs, including the lama’s dog, stayed overnight because their families had other commitments. Dogs were ‘done up’ for the occasion, washed, brushed and coiffed. Entire families proudly accompanied their obviously well loved dogs. Dogs came and went out the back door into the garden to socialize. People stayed, talked and learned about our work, including Dr. John, Ceese’s vet, a Gompa dog owner himself.

Thursday morning Ruth and I prepared gift bags, stuffing them with information, resources and dog toys. In the afternoon Ceese gave us a tour of Charlottesville, including the University of Virginia (which houses continued on page 40...

the world's second largest Tibetan library) and Serenity Ridge, a Tibetan Bon Buddhist retreat in the Blue Ridge Mountains. It was there I entered a Gompa for the first time in my life.

Using Geese's kitchen table, Friday and Saturday, I measured, weighed, microchipped, DNA swabbed a total 30 dogs while Ruth carefully recorded the information for our database. I was very impressed with the temperaments. With the exception of one dog, dogs amiably allowed us to poke and prod their bodies, take all kinds of measurements, examine their bites, collect DNA from their cheeks, manipulate their patellas and insert microchips.

Unfortunately, my photography skills dismally affected the photographs taken of each dog. Outstanding head type—particularly eye shape and expression—was apparent in most of the population.

In addition to collecting data on each individual, I made notes on the group as a whole. Taken from those notes:

General overall impressions of the group...

Excellent temperaments—I haven't counted exactly, but we gathered data on nearly 30 dogs. With one exception, I was able to get all of this without incident, including counting incisors, checking jaws and teeth. Most of the dogs were also microchipped. There were complaints from some of the dogs; reaction was to whine, cry or leave, never to bite. As the dogs came and went, there were a couple of small spats (especially when Tigle, just in heat, arrived) that were quickly over. At all times on Saturday there were at least 12 dogs milling around the house and yard.

Bites—were better than I expected—6 upper incisors; four lower and one female with 5! Most had large teeth, fully erupted. Lots of level jaws, level bites or reverse scissors.

Head type—the measurements may not reflect this, as they seemed quite consistent, but there seemed to be a vast majority of heads more like Taschi-Deleg and Ponya.

Coats—The expected colors were observed. Gold sables ranging from Nechung's reddish cast gold to Droma's "Yansom-like" gold to Gracie's cream gold. I saw no partis. The silver "grizzlies" ranged from dark to a silver chinchilla Persian cat color. Most had apparent points, some cream points, some lighter silver points. As expected coat textures were excellent, harsh, crisp, heavy. The only dog with curlish hair was Nechung.

All intact males had both testicles. 11# seemed to be what most dogs weighed. Most were approximately 10 inches tall. Only 2 were over 11”.

While the purpose of the Program isn't to compare to the western standard or breed to a written blueprint, I found it interesting that a large number of dogs could achieve championship if trained and groomed for such presentation.

I was surprised not to find more luxating patellas. Those that I found appeared to be mild. Rears were good all in all. A couple of dogs had twists in the pasterns. There were some with prominent pro-sternums, which made some length measurements fairly long."

I have now actually seen all but three dogs in our breeding population and the majority of the entire population. I have a good grip on familial resemblance; physical traits shared by members of the population and which dogs are passing on what traits. In spite of relatively high inbreeding coefficients and familial resemblance, there was some variety in traits. I attribute this to lack of selection towards a written standard.

After the last dog left Saturday night, Geese, Mac, Ruth, her husband Chris and I sank into chairs around the kitchen table—returning it to its original purpose rather than 'data station'. We celebrated a great Dog Party, toasting, eating and talking into the wee hours of the night... surrounded by dogs at our feet.

Early Sunday morning—4AM to be exact—Mac, the kind man that drove the dogs under my care to Colorado in August 2001—tapped on my door, letting me know 'the bird of time is on its wings'. Flying home, high above USA terrain, I thought about the wonderful people I had met. I thought about meeting the lama's wife and his dog. I thought about how the search for that dog started a chain of events leading to the formation of the Gompa Lhasa Apso Preservation Program. I thought about what a wonderful gift this little piece of Tibetan history brings to fanciers and breeders.

And, what was the last thought as I stood in that Gompa, awash with bright colors, steeped in the religion of Tibet? Isn't it interesting that it took one lady dedicated to Tibetan history and culture to save these dogs. Because of her efforts, not only have some of the dogs have made their way back into their heritage and culture, (albeit with a western twist), but fanciers have a precious gift from the past.
