President's Message

SEPTEMBER, 1972

Am pleased to see that our membership is increasing, however I do hope that every member will try to enlist new members for the club. Membership applications are available, just drop me a note. We particularly need more members from the Southwest, Midwest and Farwest areas.

Shortly you will be receiving a questionnaire. It is important that every member respond. It will be our final step in obtaining A.K.C. approval.

The proper papers have been drawn up and signed for our incorporation. Our thanks to Ed Sledzik who handled and represented us in this matter. ALAC will be incorporated in Virginia.

Jeanette and I were privileged to attend the Western ALAC Specialty held at Beverly Hills in June, and we were very much impressed with the high quality of Lhasas on the West Coast, but more important the warm and friendly attitude of the Lhasa exhibitor. Grace Licos did her usual excellent job and our specialty judge, Mr. William Bergum is to be commended on his excellent job and ring presence. Show results and sidelights are written up elsewhere in the bulletin.

In October I attended the Greater Detroit Lhasa Apso Club Specialty. Mr. Robert Wills judged and did a thorough and fine job. The quality of Lhasa was as fine as I have seen anywhere. I must say that hospitality is at its peak in the Detroit area. A lot can be learned about congeniality and sportsmanship from our midwest and west coast exhibitors.

Norman Herbel deserves our thanks for our new bulletin — many people talk but he produced. I have received and heard many excellent comments. Your support in advertising and newsworthy items will be most welcome.

Signed,

Robert D. Sharp

ALAC WEST COAST SPECIALTY

We arrived in Los Angeles on June 20th, the Tuesday before the show, in a flurry of dog crates, grooming equipment, luggage and, of course, Lhasas, and were rescued from the general airport confusion by Murray Teitelbaum, who was our delightful host during our stay in L.A. Their dogs, an assortment of Tuck and Kori offspring named Howard, Alice and Gaylord, accepted us graciously, but were somewhat miffed about our hairy traveling companions. All went well though, and we owe many thanks to Murray and Marjorie for their boundless hospitality.

The next days were spent in the usual show preparations, intermingled with some welcome recreation. Pat Chenoweth came down from Saratoga on Friday and was reunited with her boy, Teeters, who had been visiting with us in Ancramdale since Westminster. Teeters reminded her at once that he was the father of a Best in Show dog, and not just any common dog, but then decided they could be friends again.

On Saturday night, the contingent from the Northern California club came down and met us at a pre-meeting cocktail party given by the Teitelbaums. It was quite a houseful: Bill and Carol Stretch, Wendy Harper, Jim and Anita Nicoletti, Lynn Morgan and Raoul and Cassandra de la Rosa and who else but a charming little two-year old dog fancier named Leila de la Rosa. Of course, having a small human in the house made me feel right at home, and it was a most delightful small human indeed.

We next made our way to the meeting of the Lhasa Apso Club of Southern California, and sat down to a fine dinner of roast beef. The meeting then commenced with warm words of welcome from Lorraine Shannon, President, and then Grace Licos introduced the guests at the head table and gave the floor to Bob Sharp. Bob, after a few brief words about the progress of ALAC, turned everyone’s attention to the films of the 1972 Trenton Specialty Show, which had been lent to us for this occasion by Norman Herbel. The films were quite wonderful, and everyone was in awe, especially over the spectacular classes. I’m sure, too, that there were many who welcomed seeing dogs they had bred to, or dogs who appeared in their pedigrees. The specials, everyone agreed, were breathtaking, and although Norman had not immortalized it in celluloid, everyone knew that Raena Wilkes had beaten Bob over the head when Friar Tuck once again beat poor little Namni-La in Veteran’s Class. No hard feelings after all this time, and Tuck and Namni seemed oblivious to it all, showing just like a couple of youngsters in the classes.

Once the films were done, the meeting adjourned in a spirit of congeniality, which seemed to me a remarkable thing in itself, and not at all what I’m accustomed to. The Teitelbaums, Pat, Bob and I rushed back home for a brief night’s rest and next morning packed everything into Murray’s stationwagon and descended on the Santa Monica Civic Auditorium.

I'll do my best to describe what we saw there, although bear in mind that I saw everything through a haze of dog hair, coat spray, combs and brushes, all of which seemed to be flying in the hustle and bustle of getting dogs to the ring. First of all, what one could not fail to see is the splendor in which every ring is bedecked. The inside rings are carpeted thickly in red and the judges' tables are covered with red velvet cloths trimmed in gold. Potted palms and floral arrangements stand at every ring entrance and the spectacle is truly regal. Such surroundings suit Lhasas beautifully, I must say, but dogs will be dogs and I daresay the carpeting was well anointed by the day's end.

The entry was enormous—138 Lhasas—and Judge William Bergum is to be complimented on a most thorough job. He went over all the dogs thoroughly and gently and lost no time making his decisions. I can't go through all the dogs for you, though all of them deserve mention, but I will list the winners. The best junior puppy was Lyngso's Krisna-Tu, belonging to Jim and Anita Nicoletti and bred by Lynn Morgan sired by Ch. Chen Krisna Nor. The senior puppy, Embyr Bhotan belongs to Dr. and Mrs. Norman R. Byrd, sired by Ch. Karma Rus-Tigu. The winning novice dog, Ah-Chu Poo-ing, belongs to Elaine E. Spaeth, and Ho-Bo of Blackbay belonging to Mr. Robert H. Black, won a very impressive bred by exhibitor class. The bred by exhibitor winner is out of a lovely specials bitch that has been doing some fine winning out on the West Coast, Ch. Blackbay's Georgana of Yin Hi I.Q. Pat Chenoweth was pleased with the results of the American-bred class; Chen Tompar Nor, bred by Pat and Tom Chenoweth, sired by Ch. Nyun-Ti out of Chen Himalayan Hanah-Nor, better known as Teeters and Hanah-Bananah. (Teeters looked quite proud, by the way.) The winner of the open class was Dr. and Mrs. Leo Anderson's Frosty Chu-Lung's Tai Loy, who went on to become Winner's Dog and Reserve Winner was R.J. and Darby McSorley's Sharbo Top Guy.

The junior puppy bitch winner was Mary Gilhausen's Cordova Sakli-Tu, sired by Ch. Karma Rus-Tigu. Dick and Judy Newton won the senior puppy honors with their Tokra of Shalu, and the winning novice bitch was Sallyena of Abbotsford, owned by Helen M. Davies and Susan B. Nickels. Sharon Rouse took bred by exhibitor honors with Sharbo Me-Shanda Ba. Quizas Kennels (Jay Ammen) Quizas Chandra Tu took the American-bred class, and the winning open bitch was Lyngso's Ce- Ce of Yin Hi I.Q. owned by Lynn J. Morgan and Mrs. I.E. Quistgard. The open bitch went on to take Winner's Bitch honors and Reserve Winner was Leta L. Goodwin's Dzong Delilah of Delwood.

The specials class was a show of elegance beyond belief. Thirty-four lovely Lhasas draped their coats over the red carpet around them and it made quite a sight for the many spectators. Every one of the dogs showed with a sophistication befitting a champion. Among the seasoned showmen that I recognized were Ch. Licos Omorfo-La, owned by Grace Licos, who was the oldest dog in the ring at ten years of age, Ch. Sharpette’s Gaylord, owned by Marjorie and Murray Teitelbaum, whom I remember as a puppy; and Ch. Chen Krisna-Nor owned by Wendy Harper and Pat Chenoweth, a very attractive specimen with music in his soul. Another fellow I remember from his former days back East was Ch. Potala Kinderland’s Goliath, who made a very pretty picture with enviably heavy furnishings. Ron and Judy Griel’s Ch. On-Ba Yasha Khan of Sharbo looked simply aristocratic and performed beautifully. Of course, then there was Kori, of whom we’re all proud, but I suspect he was eyeing all the lovely ladies . . . Ch. Blackbay’s Georgana of Yin Hi I.Q., a gay moving strawberry blonde bombshell; Ch. Chamdo’s Tsering Dolma, owned by Jean Kausch, a sweet young thing who went on to win the brood bitch class; Ch. Kinderland’s Tonka, owned by Carolyn Herbel, serenely beautiful and handled by another beauty, Carol Stretch, and I even thought I caught Kori casting a lascivious glance at his daughter Ch. Sharpette’s Lady Godiva, owner-handled by Marjorie Teitelbaum, but his Uncle Bob set him straight there. There were of course many other beautiful dogs, but unfortunately I cannot mention them all.

Mr. Bergum went through all of the dogs very thoroughly and pulled out several that were his favorites, and then chose Ch. Chen Korum-Ti and Ch. Kinderland’s Tonka as his Best of Breed and Best of Opposite Sex. Bob and I were terribly excited, but Pat took it with unbelievable calm. I think she was more excited when for the fourth time, Ch. Chen Nyun-Ti took first place in the stud dog class, with Chen Tompar-Nor and Ch. Chen Krisna-Nor as his get. Kori placed second with his children Ch. Sharpette’s Lady Godiva and our own “Big Mouth” Sharpette’s Cicero tagging proudly after him. Grace Licos Omorfo-La placed third, a dog who has won many honors in his day, and now has the additional distinction of being a patriarch in a long line of excellent show dogs . . . among others to his credit are his grandson Teeters and his great-grandson Kori.

Grace Licos took Best Brace honors and went on to take the Non-Sporting Brace Group. Kori went on to take a very strong Non-Sporting Group under Mr. Charles Hamilton later that day and showed beautifully for Best in Show, but, alas, top honors were given to John Brown’s Pekingese, Drangonfire.

All in all, the excitement ran high, and we settled down at the Teitelbaum house over pizza, with much lively discussion. The following morning, we flew up to San Francisco on non-doggy business and stayed with the Stretch family, who were most hospitable. We combed Chinatown for interesting Fu dogs, and were heartsick at all we could not buy. Our last dinner was spent with Bill and Carol Stretch and Ron and Wendy Harper and our wonderful host, Dr. Harry Banoff and his lovely wife. The Banoffs are both gourmets and world travelers and lovers of things Oriental, including Mrs. Banoff’s two Lhasa Apsos. Under the good doctor’s guidance and obvious expertise, we feasted on a veritable banquet of Chinese delicacies, and enjoyed hours of good conversation as well.

The next day, we boarded our flight to New York, making sure we counted all the canine noses just to make sure we had everybody, and waved good-bye a bit wistfully to the warmth and conviviality of California and her wonderful people.

Signed,

Jeanette P. Sharp

ORPHAN PUPPIES

I am a Lhasa breeder of five years and recently raised an orphan litter of 7 pups. This may not sound like a difficult task but I learned the hard way that without any nursing on the mother or any mother care, the puppies start off on a precarious footing. Prepared formulas do not give the natural immunities in colostrum, and it becomes a touch and go situation to simulate mother care. If no nursing bitch is available to assist, I recommend recruiting a friend immediately to help in the constant watching that is required, especially during the first week.

The newborn needs a combination of food or sugar water to begin, stimulation to move bowels and urine regularly, burping to avoid gas, and a warm area. It is essential to weigh the pups after birth and to keep close watch on this weight as a counter check on the development. Also, I cannot stress enough how important it is to keep facilities and instruments spotless and disinfected. If you start with a good routine of eliminating each pup after it has been fed and using separate feeding devices, you can avoid dangerous contamination if one is sick.

There are various methods of feeding the pups, and I think that I probably experimented with all of them. I found an eyedropper with the cc’s clearly marked to be a big help at the start. A little sugar water will often bring the pup around to nursing by taste as well as give instant energy which can help in digestion. It will then be up to you to decide whether you can work better with a bottle or tube feeding. Many vets and breeders will stand by the bottle as the safer and more natural way. The pups do get to suck which helps keep them from sucking on one another and in addition, you don’t have the danger of overfeeding and choking to death.

Tube feeding can be very dangerous but if you wish to undertake it, I think it can help in many situations where the pups are in a weakened condition. I feel it is essential to have your vet or breeder demonstrate as well as having written material to refer to. My experience with the tube showed the pups more content because it substantially reduced gas, which comes from sucking air, and it made sure the formula got to the stomach rather than out the side of the mouth. I lost one of my puppies with this procedure, however, so I will stress certain precautions:

1. Always clean the tubes and syringe immediately after feeding. Always prepare fresh formula for each feeding.

2. Make sure the air bubbles are all out after filling the syringe by tapping it where you see a bubble until the bubble is at the opening then squirt it through the tube.
3. Measure each pup carefully to get the proper length of tube and mark it. Don’t Guess.

4. If the puppy is in distress or gags, pinch the tube and withdraw it right away. Then turn that pup down and try to shake the milk out.

I lost my puppy when it had begun to lap milk. I was still using the tube and it became more difficult to judge the proper amount. I knew the puppies were not getting enough nourishment from the pan, so I used the tube to supplement. I overfed the one pup, who was also my largest with an insatiable appetite, and she inhaled milk into the lungs — I was also using a 25cc syringe that day instead of the regular 10cc and I found it more difficult to judge the pressure in the larger model. Normally a pressure can be felt as the pup is filling up, and this is a sure sign to quit. If you can get a successful feeding method and schedule, you will be over a major hump in caring for the pups.

Orphan pups also experience many medical problems and you should be ready for anything. It is essential that they receive a globulin shot or an appropriate substitute, as early as the vet will administer it in order to start building immunity. Your vet may wish to continue this on a weekly or bi-weekly program for a while. Do not make the mistake, however, in thinking this shot will eliminate all problems. The worst and most constant problem I faced was of fading puppies. Beware of the pup who is cold, colicky, listless, refuses food or with diarrhea.

I believe that with a sick pup especially during the first three weeks you should run not walk to your friendly vet. He will probably give an antibiotic and appropriate dexolyte solution to turn the corner on the fading. There are many drugs available to help but don’t try to diagnose and administer yourself. If diarrhea is a problem, a kaopectate combination with antibiotic will generally help. Some antibiotics will discolor the first set of baby teeth later on but if a pup is dying, give him the medicine. The adult teeth normally do not carry this discoloration. There are some valuable articles on newborn puppy diseases and one that I recommend was in Dog World, December issue, 1970.

I had a couple of medical problems which were not covered in any material that I had at my disposal. My puppies did not gain significantly from their birth weight until they were six weeks old. They had all experienced fading and pulled through but were continuing to be weak and not in a growth spurt. They were still on straight formula since they choked and coughed when pablum was added. In desperation I decided to vary their diet. I added beef or liver baby food to the esbilac and Karo syrup for my big ones and blended and strained it well. I built up my smaller ones with a little raw liver juice to the formula and very gradually gave all of them tiny raw ground chuck balls (ground 3X) to suck on. I also took each pup separately and started trying it on lapping. Sometimes the puppy required burping and attention because of a strangling after the lapping, but I went ahead and continued the program with care. One day they turned the corner and started to become puppies. The coat came in slowly at first, and I had one more problem with a sudden weight gain, causing a collapse in one puppy’s front legs. I was in the clear after this incident. The weight progression was 8-12 oz. at birth, still under a pound at six weeks, then at three months they were over six pounds.

The experience of raising these Lhasa and having them so healthy today has increased my appreciation of the mother dog who deals with the day to day situations so effortlessly. I can’t help but have a special feeling for these babies, and I am proud to announce that one of the girls just took the adult group second in a match at Lynchburg, Va. at 3½ months.

Signed,

Jane Browning
