RECORD HOLDER IN THE BREED

PUBLISHED BY

THE AMERICAN LHASA APSO CLUB
Kham ROM June, 1961 to August 1974

Whelped June 6, 1961 in Anchorage, Alaska, “Kham” was one of seven and was soon to be known as the “ugly duckling” of the litter with long legs and a slow growing coat.

Being unable to sell him even as a pet, I started his show career at 6 months of age with a BOW at the Kennel Club of Philadelphia show. Less than a year later he completed his championship with a 4 pt. major and BOS at Sussex Hills. At 17 months he won Group I at Salisbury, Md.

Owner handled between 1964-1965, he consistently placed in the Groups with several Group 1’s, including the prestigious Kennel Club of Philadelphia on December 11, 1965 under judge Henry Stoecker.

At this point it was apparent that “Kham” was ready to “go.” I leased him to Mrs. Michael Pym. Mrs. Pym gave him to handler Jane Kay who piloted him to this most impressive record:

5 BEST IN SHOWS
21 Group I
17 Group II
15 Group III
10 Group IV
93 Best of Breeds

The above show record makes “Kham” a record holder in the breed as no other Lhasa had compiled more wins up until that time. He was retired from the ring, May 14, 1967.

Not only was “Kham” a great show dog, but he has been a great sire as well. He has 20 Champion Offspring and multitudes of Grandchildren too many to count. He was the #1 Register of Merit Sire on the ALAC Top 20 Listing for 1973.

When his show career was over, he returned home where he was loved until he drew his last breath. He is missed very much, but we are grateful to have his lovely group winning son Ch. Linghor Bhu of Norbulingka to carry on his name.

Kham was the cornerstone of Norbulingka Kennels; he helped us to be remembered and respected in the world of Lhasadom. Thank you Kham.

LHASA TALK WITH THE PRESIDENT

October was a great month for our Club. The Board of Directors again visited another area of our Country (Detroit) and our first Forum was held. All I have heard were favorable reactions to the Forum. A special thanks should be given to David Goldfarb and the members of the Detroit Lhasa Apso Club for making the first weekend in October something to remember. I am looking forward to our February Forum in New York. I hope you can make it.

The Board has been meeting this year in the regions. These meetings will give the Parent Club more of a national flavor. In the past, most of our meetings were held on the East Coast. Moving around gives most of our membership the opportunity to meet with the Board. It gives the Board the opportunity to hear first hand from those who cannot travel East for the meetings. I consider these meetings a real chance to better know you and to better represent you. No matter what your opinions are, it is important that you get a chance to be heard by the Board.

In the past a few misunderstandings had arisen because the Board members were strangers to many of you. This exposure to the Regions may help to show you that we have the interests of the Apso at heart.

The New Year is just around the corner. I wish you all the best in 1975 and hope that the love of your Lhasa Apso may bring you happiness in this new year.

Absolutely yours,

Ed Sledzik

BEST HOLIDAY WISHES TO ALL

Specialty Chairwoman
Norman: Forums serve the purpose of an educational tool and that primarily is what this is going to be. If there are any results from this FORUM that will or can be incorporated into any revision of the standard, that is just an end result and it is not THE end result — it is not the purpose of this particular FORUM.

I think it is very important that we can sit with a panel of many, many years of experience not only in Lhasas but pure-bred dogs, and as students of structure and anatomy. I think it is fitting that we introduce our panel at this time: Georgia Palmer, Ruffway Kennels; Ellen Lonigro, Kinderland; Keke Blumberg, Potala; Sharon Binkowski, Arborhill; Robert Berndt, Author of Your Lhasa Apso; Carolyn Herbel, Tabu Lhasas.

BITE

Norman: Our first question for the panel is: "Do you think the standard should be revised as to bite? How would you word such a revision? Would you classify any bite as a fault?

Sharon: I think I would work for a revision in the standard on the mouth, if nothing else, simply rewording it. I had run across an occasional judge that saw the words "undershot preferable" and they stuck with that rather than the true mouth which is level ... I think I would do away with the "undershot preferable" or have it a little better worded.

As far as my own personal opinion, and I know it is a very controversial one, I dislike to see a Lhasa with an overshot mouth. I think it is very much against type. I don't know if it would be rated a serious fault; but I personally feel that it should be one.

Keke: I agree with Sharon, I would definitely delete "preferable" ... If it were entirely up to me, I would say, "Mouth level, otherwise slightly undershot."

Carolyn: I definitely agree that something has to be done with that second phrase, either "otherwise" has to be eliminated, or "preferable" has to be ... because it makes it sound when you read it in a hurry, as though undershot is the preferable bite, and that is not what our standard requests.

As to bite, I would leave it the same, however I would allow a scissors and make an overshot bite a very serious fault.

Ellen: I do not like the words "Undershot preferable" because many times people do misunderstand this. I've had people ... say, "Well, my dog has a beautiful undershot mouth." And it is like a half inch! And they say, "Well, that is preferred to an even bite." And I say, "No it is not."

I would also like to see an overshot as a fault ...

Bob: I would like it to say: "Level bite is preferred; the slightly undershot mouth is acceptable; excessively undershot or overshot are faults."

Georgia: I would definitely classify very undershot or an overshot as a fault. And I don't mean very overshot, but I mean a very obviously or definitely overshot bite as a fault. And I would like to see some mention made of scissors bite, because the standard leaves it in limbo ... People who have been in other breeds like shepherds, know the acceptable bite is a scissors and an overshot bite is still a fault. I would like to clarify this ...
Joyce Stambaugh: I think the dogs in the ring today are heavily penalized for a scissors bite, and I would like to know whether the panel feels that the scissors bite should be so defined as either acceptable or objectionable, and whether it should be included in the standard?

Keke: Acceptable.

Georgia: Acceptable.

Ellen: I will go along with it as acceptable; ... But I want to make sure these are real scissors bites and not slightly overshot ... So therefore I want to go back to the overshot as a fault.

Carolyn: I accept them. And I would like to say that a scissors bite is when the upper incisors overlap the lower incisors, and they touch. If they do not touch, it is overshot.

Sharon: I accept.

Bob: I do not accept a scissors bit now in the ring — other things being equal. It is very seldom you get two dogs that are equal. But if a dog had a scissors and another had a reverse scissors, I would prefer the reverse scissors — in other words the undershot.

Question: I think most people feel that way, but would you consider the scissors bite acceptable?

Bob: As it stands now, no. Not unless they wrote it in the standard that the scissors bite is acceptable. I would like to have a picture then in the standard, so people can really see what the scissors is ...

Question: Do you want to add scissors bite to the standard; if so, why?

Georgia: We are working with a breed where the perfect bite is dead level. A scissors bite is just off dead level, while reverse scissors is just off dead level to the other direction. I don’t think the small difference should make a bite that is faulty. I think it should be acceptable, but along with that to make the overshot bite a fault would help to correct the tendency to add more length to the upper jaw.

Carolyn: I think it should be added ... A scissors bite is probably the most universally accepted and proper of all breeds. ... And I think by permitting an undershot and not accepting the scissors, we’re going to revert back to horribly undershot.

Question: If you accept scissors bite, won’t that in your breeding lead to overshot?

Carolyn: That being the case then the many breeds that accept and will not tolerate any other bite but scissors, would have a great problem with overshot — which they do not. I feel it is a misconception that scissors breeds overshot.

Question: Since our breed of dog is supposed to be an oriental breed, if we go to a scissors bite, what characteristic do we have left that keeps our dog oriental?

Bob: Most of the “orientals” do have “bad mouths.” They’re undershot, and if you remember Lhasas a few years ago they had anywhere from three to six incisors and they were terribly misaligned. Mouths are so much better today than they were fifteen years ago — but the Shih Tzu have bad mouths, the Pekingese have bad mouths, the Japanese Spaniels are not outstanding. I think it would change the character of the dog ... slightly.

GAIT and MOVEMENT

Norman: Do you feel a revision of the Lhasa Apso Standard should include a description of gait or movement? If yes, how would you describe proper movement?

Georgia: Yes, I believe the standard ought to include something on gait and movement. I would like to see the standard mention smoothness of gait, without a bounce ...
Keke: I think the Lhasa described in the standard should have a free flowing gait. And I would maybe want to go into a little more detail, but just at the moment I don’t have it down.

Carolyn: I definitely agree that we should say something about the fact that the dog has to move. I personally like to see a Lhasa that has good reach and drive, ultimately having (to steal Keke’s phrase) a “free flowing movement.” I think possibly you would get involved in shoulder layback and angles to clarify this because if the angles are right, then you would ultimately end up with the proper gait.

Question: What do you define layback of shoulders to be — and how does that fit with topline?

Ellen: I don’t know if I can put that in words; as a German Shepherd breeder I was taught that layback of shoulders with a long upper arm was very important in movement. You get your best outreaching movement from dogs who have proper layback . . . I don’t know if we want 45 degrees like the Shepherd or not.

Barry Tompkins: In reference to gait, I definitely feel that angles should be included. An off the cuff wording, something that also should be included is reach and drive — one should not overshadow the other.

Norman: In other words you mean a balanced dog?

Barry: Somewhere in the description of gait that should be in there, because you may have a dog that reaches tremendously well, but is very underpowered in the rear.

Question: When you’re judging, I know you judge carriage of the head and topline and other items not in the standard, but are general knowledge. Would you like to see these included and if so, under what article?

Bob: The gait is going to be discussed under body shape. I think we’re going to have to talk about lay-back. I think we’re going to have to talk about topline; I think we’re going to have to talk about rear angulation, because if the dog has poor angulation in the rear, if he has one height in the front and another in the rear, then he moves in a different way. If the angulation front and back is not matched he sidewinds. It doesn’t matter where the angulation is bad. He can be perfect in front and perfect in rear, but he will not gait true. So much of movement . . . is the length of the two bones; you can have a 90° angle, but if one of the bones is longer than it should be, that does something entirely different . . . The angles are very important — move the angles around and see what it does to the dog — it changes movement drastically.

Question: Nothing about speed and drive?

Bob: I think you can talk about drive and reach. And you always have to keep in mind the proportion of the dog you’re talking about. We don’t want to see the Lhasa running around the ring as we frequently do. Everyone is trying to speed up their dogs. People are equating speed with movement, and that’s very bad. Good movement can come in a very slow moving dog, or a fast moving dog. In my personal opinion we would like to see a moderately fast moving dog, not running, but then not loping along like a bull dog.

Question: I’d like somebody to describe what they consider proper angulation for our breed?

Bob: Might be easier just to put a picture in:

DID YOU KNOW?

That the Lhasa Apso was first introduced into England in 1928 by the Hon. Mrs. Bailey, whose husband, Colonel Eric Bailey, was for many years British Political Officer for Tibet, and it was on one of her annual visits there that Mrs. Bailey was presented with her first Apsos.

That the snapshots accompanying the Western ALAC Specialty feature in the Sept. 1974 “Lhasa Bulletin” were snapped by Jeanne Clawson?

That if you lose an hour in the morning you will be all day hunting for it?

That there are 81 litters nominated as of November 15, 1974 and the Futurities will be held in Seattle, New Orleans & Washington, D.C.?

That the AKC has published a new 50 page booklet entitled “THE FORMATION OF DOG CLUBS” that explains in detail the organizing of a club? This booklet is obtainable from the American Kennel Club, 51 Madison Ave., New York, New York 10010. If you are planning to start a new Lhasa Club this booklet will lead the way.

That November 23, 1974 made history in the world of Lhasas? On this day the NATIONAL CAPITAL AREA LHASA APSO CLUB held the first independent Lhasa Apso Specialty Show to ever be held in the USA. There was an entry of 113 Lhasa Apsos entered and the event was judged by Mr. Jay C. Shaeffer.

That when Edmund Hillary and his native guide, Tenzing, made their historic climb of Mt. Everest, coming down from the peak Hillary suddenly lost his footing? Tenzing held the line taut and kept them both from falling by digging his ax into the ice. Later Tenzing refused any special credit for saving Hillary’s life; he considered it a routine part of the job. As he put it: “Mountain climbers always help each other.” (Should the rest of us be any different?)

That ALAC has 1000 feet of super 8 movies of the 1972 Futurity & Eastern Specialty for rent to Local Clubs or individuals? The films are complete with a written commentary and available to you for $25.00.

That there is a National Dog Obedience monthly magazine called “Off-Lead”? It is a magazine particularly for the obedience minded but is quite interesting for those not involved in obedience. The address is Off-Lead, 8140 Coronado Lane, Rome, N.Y. 13440.

That the LHASA APSO CLUB OF GREATER HOUSTON has available again this year the appointment calendars? They are all new photos for 1975 and may be ordered for $2.25 Postage Paid from: Megan Shirley, 3340 S. MacGregor Way, Houston, Tx. 77021.

That nothing is easier than fault finding? No talent, no self-denial, no brains, no character are required to set up in the grumbling business.

That ALAC has 584 paid members as of December 1, 1974?

That the best way to forget your own problem is to help someone solve his?

That in order to receive your awards at the Third Annual Awards Dinner, Feb. 1975 the necessary information must be sent to the Awards Chairman by January 1, 1975? (See page 15 Sept., 1973 “Lhasa Bulletin” for rules and regulations or contact Stephen Campbell, 64 Wilburth Rd., West Trenton, N.J. 08628)

Many of the letters I have received lately have complained of one problem — LAGGING. I have this problem also so I know how frustrating it can be.

As my dog lagged more off lead than on, I first tried to correct this with fishline. I used a lead with a very heavy catch so when I took it off he would really think he was off lead from the lack of weight. The fishline was on the collar right from the start. We started off and I gave a huge jerk. Surprise! The dog was corrected and my hands were in pain. This worked for about a week until my hands could no longer hold anything, the dog got wise and the "unbreakable" fishline kept breaking. However, it's worth a try if you wear gloves and your dog doesn't catch on too soon.

Another method I tried was running through the heeling exercise. Your dog is apt to think you've fallen off your rocker but he might just worry enough to move a little faster to see what you'll do next. This method has its drawbacks though because if you're not in track team condition the running could ruin you for the rest of the day.

My next method was the one that I think worked best. I took a piece of liver or something my dog finds irresistible to nose and palate. Then I started to heel with that morsel dangling out of my left hand right in front of his nose. He thought this was wonderful as I had to keep giving him some so he would remain interested. The obvious drawback to this method is the expense of his favorite tidbit and he may not eat his dinner to save room for training goodies.

Overall, I guess the best advice I can give is try to keep the dog interested as lagging is really a sign of boredom. Vary the order of exercises. Don't always start with heeling. Do something he does well first and give lots of praise so he can "ride on his high" into the heeling exercise. Also vary the heeling pattern. Do serpentines, figure eights, triangles, heel down to the mailbox and back, make patterns your dog doesn't know or expect and he'll be forced to pay attention. But most important keep him happy and he'll love to go with you.

This year there will be a special award in obedience given at the ALAC Third Annual Awards Dinner in February. This award will go to the OWNER-HANDLER-TRAINER who has acquired three or more degrees on their Lhasas. It can be 3 C.D.'s on 3 dogs or a C.D., C.D.X., U.D. on one dog. Any combination is eligible as long as it adds up to three degrees. If you are eligible for this award please write to me with your dog's name(s) and the gazette in which the title(s) appeared by Jan. 1st, 1975.

I received a letter from Susan Gehr about her trip to Canada with her "Princess Shana," C.D. Shana qualified for her Canadian C.D. in three consecutive days with scores of 183, 193, and 190½. Only about one half of the dogs entered each day qualified. Shana is a very small dog and was surrounded each day by much larger dogs. The Canadian people appreciated her work and she put on quite a show for them. I also received a report from a Canadian Member of ALAC Arlene Miller whose “Can. Ch. Kyi Nanga Punzee of Dee El Aye” acquired her Can. C.D. with scores of 180, 180½, and 178.

At the Newton K.C. Match Show in June, I was very excited to see a Lhasa "Twin Maples San Po Tu" owned by Mrs. Robert Shaak and handled by Bobbie Shaak WIN the sub-novice class over 45 dogs. The winning score was 153½ out of a possible 155. That was a real achievement for a Lhasa.

Finally a correction from the A.K.C. concerning tying the fall back in obedience. Since the article last year, they received too many letters telling them Lhasas are never shown with the hair tied back. Therefore, they have reversed their decision and we cannot legally tie the hair back. This is something we all have to work together to change. Please let me know if you have any ideas.

Signed

Barbara Wood
