BEST IN SHOW
AMERICAN & CANADIAN CH. KYI CHU SHARA ROM
2nd LHASA APSO BITCH IN THE HISTORY OF THE BREED TO WIN BEST IN SHOW
OWNER: KEKE BLUMBERG (Potala)
BREEDER: TERRY SMITH (Kyi Chu) PUBLISHED BY THE AMERICAN LHASA APSO CLUB
This gorgeous platinum beauty accomplished most of her show career before her third birthday. Whelped July 4, 1964, Shara retired from active campaigning in May, 1967 following her climatic win at the American Lhasa Apso Club Specialty at Trenton over an entry of 51 under Judge Keith Browne. She went on to win Group 3 under Mrs. Florence Broadhurst. Her American show career included Best in Show All-Breeds at the Camden County Kennel Show, December 1966, 6 Group Firsts and 37 other Group placements. She was handled to 9 Group Placements by her owner and then on to greater glory with handler, Jane Kay.

Shara came out of retirement only long enough to go to Canada and win the required amount of points to be a Canadian Champion. Although not being shown after 1967, Shara made her mark known in the area of motherhood as she is the dam of six Champion offspring.

Shara was bred by Terry Smith, her sire and dam being Ch. Karma Kanjur and Ch. Kyi-Chu Kira, CD.

Shara’s importance in the show ring and as a producer is quite evident, however, the most important role she played was to be the companion dog who each night shared the pillow with her owner, Keke Blumberg, who loved her very much.

If you ever visited Dr. Leon Blumberg’s office you would see photos of his children, their mother Keke shooting her “hole in one” and Shara winning her Best in Show.

Shara is a history maker in our breed; being the Second Bitch in the History of the Breed to Win an All-Breed Best in Show.

It is the belief, however, of this author that the history making that Shara did as beloved house pet of the Dr. Leon Blumberg family is of supreme importance too.

LHASA TALK WITH THE PRESIDENT

Another year has passed and May is just around the corner. Our annual meeting, election and the Specialty Show in Trenton and Los Angeles will be here soon. Looking back on the year, we have certainly been active.

The Board traveled this year. We held meetings in California, Michigan and New York City. We had a chance to meet many of you for the first time and to also renew old acquaintances. It gave us a chance to hear from you. Meeting people and talking with them about Apsos is very healthy.

In addition to travel, some new concepts were introduced this year.
(a) The Forum. Reaction to this has been excellent. Those of you who have attended the Forum generally feel that it is a worthwhile experience.

(b) The Health Committee. This Committee has helped us to go a long way in providing help to various veterinary schools involved with Lhasa Apso research. The Club is committed to these health projects and to the well being of the Lhasa Apso.

(c) Judges and Specialty Shows. By allowing the membership to participate in a run-off of the top Judges and show sites indicated by polling the membership, we are now able to get a majority of our members to make the final decision on the Specialty Judges and Show Sites.

(d) The Historians. The historians have presented an up to date history of our Club and its activities from 1959 to the present. We hope that the membership will be able to receive copies of this history within the next few months.

(e) Local Specialty Club Participation. In our travels, we have made sure that every Lhasa Apso Specialty Club had a chance to send a representative to us so that they may discuss their particular problems and ideas. In May, we hope to initiate an annual luncheon for Presidents or their representatives of the Local Specialty Clubs. This will be held in conjunction with the Eastern Specialty Show. The meeting will be the first of what I hope can be an advisory committee to the ALAC Board of Directors.

Numerous events took place this year. When added to the events that have been implemented in the past, we have greatly increased our Club's appeal to the membership. If you have not found an interest yet, just wait a while, we are bound to find one for you. ALAC has gone a long way to being a truly "National Club." The Board is interested in you. We want our members in all areas of the Country to feel that ALAC is doing something for them and their Apsos.

Thank you all for helping make this an excellent year for Apsos.

Ed Sledzik
The Lion Dog of Tibet did indeed cast his shadow over the American Lhasa Apso Club’s Third Annual Awards Dinner-Meeting and Forum; February 9, 1975 at the Beef & Bourbon Restaurant in New York City. As a recognized member club of the AKC, the exquisite style of the 148 humble followers made for an evening of celebration and wealth.

The sincere desire to epitomize our Lhasas was quite evident during the forum. People who have been growing with the Lhasa breed for the last 10 years; and who know more about our Lhasas than time allotted them to share; truly can be considered the core of our Lions’ Kingdom. The opinions, experiences, desires and dreams for the future of the Lhasa in America were shared and heard by all. One basic fact was prevalent throughout the entire forum; and that is, the Standard of the Lhasa will not be elaborated out of proportion.

The beautiful plaques with their proud Lhasas were awarded by Stephen G.C. Campbell, Awards Chairman to many a happy winner. The year’s hard work made for some very pleased owners, as well as Lhasas. There might have been some competition as to whose tail was higher; owner or Lhasa. Our beautiful breed was and still is being exemplified over and over.

Look up, join the now generation, as Lhasas are stepping into Obedience. Barbara Wood, Obedience Chairperson of ALAC, very proudly presented for the first time, CD and CDX awards.

Honors were bestowed on Raena Wilks as chairperson for her unrelentless efforts to make the “Third” the success it was. Long stem red roses were presented by Ray Slezik, president of ALAC. Also receiving long stem roses was Phyllis Spindell who represented the Lhasa Apso Club of Greater New York, the host of the Third Awards Dinner. (p.s. Raena and Phylis spilled some tears!! — vive la femme!)

Compliments to the chef are well in order for a delicious dinner. We DO salute your ART!

Many thanks are also extended to all those behind the scene Lhasa puppies who worked hard.

Congratulations to Gordon Joines and Phyllis Marcy who won the raffles of a Tinsel Lhasa (donated by Joan Ganz) and a tea set respectively.

Mr. Charles Ray, an honored guest of ALAC, graciously accepted ALAC’s first Award for Heroism by a Lhasa Apso to a standing ovation. May we all take a moment of silence to give our gift of peace to a very courageous man:

To all the new Friends-of-Lhasas we met, we bid you a most hearty welcome into the shadow of our King Lion.

To all our old friends we bid you the best of competition in ’76.

See you all in ’76!

OBEDIENCE COLUMN

This article was written by Virginia Murphy of "Arion Lhasa Apsos." She has been training in obedience for many years and had a Lhasa honored at this year’s awards dinner for attaining a C.D.

"With love and patience, obedience training can develop your Lhasa into a greater pleasure to live with, and a dog which is secure in whatever surroundings he may find himself. If you have trained properly, you will find he regards his work as a means of expressing himself (!) and you will be on the way to benefiting from a new knowledge of him. Later, in his work, rather than receiving a command, he will be answering a message! It is within your ability to experience the development of a most wonderful and special communication with your dog.

Whether you decide to attend an Obedience Class, or to work only at home, obedience training requires only ten to fifteen minutes of your time, perhaps four consecutive days a week.

You may enroll in one of the many good classes, and do the prescribed “homework,” or you CAN train at home. If you choose to train at home, and plan to show your dog, you will need to expose him to the same type of conditions which exist in ring competition. He must be able to do the Stays with other dogs on either side of him, and must not be disturbed by ringside distractions. There will be no instructor to point out your mistakes or to answer any urgent questions! You will have to call forth your own careful judgment. You, yourself, must first understand the work in order to make it clear to your dog what you are asking of him before he can do it!

If you choose a class, there will be many benefits, including other people who share your interest. Remember to have your dog freshly brushed (or bathed) when he goes to class, for here he may be the first Lhasa Apso your class has seen, and you want him to be a meticulous AMBASSADOR OF THE BREED!

I have had the experience of working with a Lhasa which becomes embarrassed by not knowing her work well! I always train my dogs at home until they understand the work, then I attend several classes so that the part of learning which consists of working in company with other dogs and distractions is not overlooked. In this manner, this particular dog does not become embarrassed.

Preparation

Wear comfortable, loose clothes, and appropriate shoes.

Take a minute to think how you will present your work to your dog, and which direction you will start off in. Perhaps you might like to tack up some notes in a handy place.
You will need a nylon choke collar (this fabric will not damage the coat!) and a six-foot training lead. I prefer a thin leather lead which is light to hold and handle, with a small bolt snap. A large snap tends to swing in a small dog's face. Determine the correct size collar to buy by measuring from under the throat and up over the skull, allowing an extra two inches which will hang through the ring, giving the collar a complete looseness.

Adjust the collar so that the 'live' ring end pulls through to his right, your left as you face him. Having your collar pull to the right (as you face him) is wrong and will make it tighten, catch in the hair, and not allow the correct looseness which it must have at all times when it is not being used for corrections. Put the dog on the grooming table where he will sit or lie quietly while you carefully put on his collar. I have my Lhasa lie on his stomach as though I were fixing his Fall. I lay the two ring part of the collar under the chin, taking the remaining part up over the Fall, lifting one ear at a time inside it. Then, using both hands, simultaneously, my fingers smooth the neck hair down around the collar, from the nape of the neck, down under the ears to in front of the neck where the two rings lie.
In doing this, you are seeing that the neck hair lies naturally and the collar rests on a sort of 'circular part'. If the dog is being properly (routinely) brushed out and the collar is put on this way, I find the collar never becomes tangled in the coat! You may find you tangle hairs in taking it off, but the actual way the collar, itself moves when properly used will not catch or damage coat. After the collar is on, I say, "O.K.," and he stands, shakes, and is ready to go along to his lesson. I do not ask my dog to heel on the way to the training area. "A little nonsense now and then is treasured by the wisest men." (Anon). Once we are there, I halt and have him sit at my heel.

A level place in familiar surroundings with ample room which is free from distractions and loud noises provides a good training area.

Remember, if you show your dog you may be working in rain and Heaven knows what, so do not forget to take advantage of these conditions occasionally at home! I have found even pouring rain and mud do not bother my Lhasa's coat, nor do I have any problem restoring its original condition!

At the end of the lesson, take the collar off, carefully separating any hairs which may have become caught in the rings. This is the time I join my Lhasa in the living-room for PLAY — a celebration of a 'job well done'!

Congratulations to everyone who received his achievement award at the 3rd Annual Awards Dinner this year. It was the biggest list yet. A special congratulations to Melodye Haverly of Charmel Lhasa Apsos who is the first recipient of the new obedience trophy for completion of three obedience titles. She earned a C.D.X. on MEE-TU OF CHARMEL and has a C.D. on CHARMEL'S MING-TU. MEE-TU C.D.X. already has her first leg on her Utility Degree. When she completes this degree she will be one of maybe 3 or 4 Lhasas to earn this degree. In 1974, 17 Lhasas earned C.D. degrees but there were no C.D.X.'s or U.D.'s.

This is not only a memorial to "Tish" and "Cherch," it is also a tribute to the kind of Lhasa one is proud to be owned by. They manifested a special kind of courage and determination to live throughout their ordeal which began in January of 1974. "Gay and assertive" they were — right up to the day before they lapsed into their respective final comas.

Although the months passing will eventually relieve some of the grief and loss at their untimely deaths, time will not dissipate the lessons learned.

In that, they may rest — assured.

LHASA APSOS IN GERMANY

The following is excerpts from letters received from our ALAC member in Germany, Mr. Patronas.

Mr. Patronas writes: "Here in Germany there is no Lhasa Apso Club but a club for Tibet races, called "Internationale Klub für Tibetische Hunderassen" (International Club for Tibetan Breeds). This includes Lhasa Apsos, Tibetan Terriers and Tibetan Spaniels. In the club there are approximately 200 members and in Germany between 80 and 100 Lhasa Apsos. There are not too many Lhasa Apsos in Germany but they are becoming more popular. At the shows there seems to be more interest around the Lhasas than the other dogs, most probably being that they are different than the usual dogs here in Germany. They most probably would become more popular but are expensive for someone just looking for a house pet.

Even though there are not many here in Germany, the people that do own one, are quite often at the shows. That makes it real nice because then you have friends all over Europe. Listed below are shows that we attended this year and how many Lhasas were there:

- Innsbruck, Austria — 4
- Stuttgart, Germany — 8
- Ludwigshaven, Germany — 4
- Graz, Austria — 3
- Arnheim, Holland — 6
- Mol, Belgium — 7
- Brussels, Belgium — 7
- Bremen, Germany — 6
- Essen, Germany (Europe Show) — 11
- Linz, Austria — 5
- Wurzburg, Germany — 2
- Antwerp, Belgium — 8
- Offenburg, Germany — 6

With so few Lhasas here you can see why there is very seldom over 8 at a Dog Show and sometimes not even the first one. I imagine you can understand why it is not hard to win titles if you have a good Lhasa Apso, however I do think that there are not so many shows over here as you have in the USA. For example last year we only had seven shows here in Germany and to date there are ten planned for this year. On 1 December will be the last show for this year in Kortrijk, Belgium. We are hoping that the weather is nice because we have also registered for that show. It is usually one of the nicest in Europe. There are also some other shows in December, January and February but they don't count for us because they are too far away (Italy, south France etc.). We try to only attend shows that we don't have to travel over 500 miles one way.

We are really looking forward to this show on 1 Dec. as it will be the first show that our youngest Lhasa will be old enough for the Jugendklasse. So far she has only been in the Jungestklasse. We are expecting a lot from her. To date the judges have all thought a lot of her. We are taking our oldest along also but most probably will not let her go into the ring. She is in hair change now and her hair is too dry. Also in Belgium they like smaller dogs and she is on the larger side of the standard. In fact maybe too large for a female but most of the dogs you see here from England are large. The ones from Belgium and Holland are smaller. Our older dog is 11¼ inches and our smaller one 9½ inches.

Here in Europe we have the following classes:
- JUNGESTKLASSEE — 6 months - 9 months
- JUNGENKLASSEE — 9 months - 24 months
- OFFENKLASSEE — 15 months - and older
- CHAMPIONKLASSEE
- OUT-OF-COMPETITIONKLASSEE

I have spoken with the president of our club and if you have nothing against it, he would like to use portions from your magazine, “The Lhasa Bulletin” in our portion of the magazine “Unser Rassenhund” published by the VDH. This is the magazine that is similar to the “Gazette” published by the AKC over there. He also said that if the American Lhasa Apso Club is interested that we — our club here — would like to start working closer with your club. We would also like to extend an invitation to the Lhasa owners in the USA to bring their Lhasas with them if they would ever decide to make a vacation over here and show them.

When reading your “Lhasa Bulletin” we especially found it interesting to read about 92 Lhasas at one show and 113 at another. You can understand this when you remember that we only have approximately 100 here. We especially found it interesting that members even elect some of the judges. We also found interesting that your dogs always list their titles before their names. For example American & Canadian Champion. Over here we are also proud of our titles but in a lot of cases they are not all listed. For example the father of our youngest Lhasa is entitled to list the following — International-French-Holland-German-Belgium-Hungarian-Chekslovakia-European and World Champion plus the title Internationale Champion of Beauty before his name.

A couple from the United States fell in love with our Lhasas while they were visiting here. After they returned to the USA they priced Lhasa Apso puppies but found that they were too expensive for them. The puppies which they priced were in a pet shop. Incidentally this is not allowed here in Germany. If anybody would be caught selling their puppies in a Pet Shop then no papers or pedigrees would be issued for the puppies.”

Charles Patronas

I hope that you found these excerpts from Mr. Patronas’ letters as interesting and enjoyable as we did.

ON THE LHASA APSO BREED STANDARD

New York, New York February 8, 1975

Stephen Campbell — Rimar Lhasas
Phyllis Marcy — Norbulingka Lhasas
David Marshall — Maru Lhasas
Paula Lieberman — Tyba
Dorothy Kendall Lohmann — Orlane
Grace Licos — Licos Lhasas

MODERATOR: Mildred Bryant of Milbryan Kennels, Paradise, Texas, couldn’t be with us tonight but she wrote some of her recommendations for changes in the Standard, and I’d like to use one of those as a starting point. She writes: “Mouth: delete, or put in italics, the word ‘preferable.’ Never would I be happy with scissors overbite. I agree with Frances Sefton when she says we will lose the oriental look when we breed scissors or overbite; if we lose this oriental look, we could well end up with an ‘American Lhasa’.”

GRACE: Well, I sort of go along with that. I see an awful lot of overshot bites; and I think it’s real bad. I go along with not trying to get an absolute even bite and getting an overshot bite. Scissors bite would be fine if they stay at that level, but the first thing you know they’ve overshot, and I don’t like that.

DOROTHY: I agree with that same point of view. I agree that in many breeds we can breed for scissors bite, and have them come along with no problems. I’ve raised schnauzers since 1959 and know that the scissors bite is dominant with no problems. However, Lhasas have a different head type. They are a result of a longer muzzle and a shorter muzzle combined in many of our dogs, and I think when we do this we tend to bring about other changes in the mouth structure; and I agree that when we breed for a scissors, too many times we will get an overbite; and I don’t mean a tight scissor bite, but a space between the teeth and this really does destroy the oriental look.

PAULA— Well I agree on the present standard, as far as I can see—that is level or slightly undershot.

DAVID MARSHALL: I am very conscious of the scissors-over or the scissors bite, I’ve had some problems myself with overbites from breeding this kind of animal, and I think it’s an extremely difficult type of thing to overcome if you get it started. And I admit I’ve had some problems and I’m trying to correct this problem and I’d rather have them even or slightly under; then you take much less chance of getting this problem. I understand also from friends out on the coast that they’ve had this problem out there with bite. And I think we all will if we get “too good” a bite. Now “too good” a bite is getting even bite or scissors-over and things. Now I think this can cause a major problem in the breed. This is my personal opinion.

PHYLLIS: I'm very against a scissors bite which to me would ruin the oriental look of the Lhasa. I think we should aim for as even or level bite as possible and reverse scissor if you don't get an even bite.

STEPHEN: Well, I've seen some overshot bites from dogs with short muzzles and I've seen some scissors bites from dogs also with short muzzles, (the oriental-type head). I frankly think we should accept a level, a scissors, a reverse scissors, and a slightly undershot. I think there is a great difference between a scissors and an overshot, and I would not fault a scissors bite.

BOB: I go along with the Standard as it is now; although I can see where a lot of the judges may have a problem, particularly the older judges who used to judge terriers and in the terrier group. The preferable bite for most terriers would be what you might consider the scissors bite. I guess it was in the 50's when they took the Lhasa out of the terrier group and put them in the non sporting group. I do think it ruins the look somewhat of the Lhasa. However I think it's more the muzzle length that ruins it, along with that, rather than the scissors bite. I would prefer to see it level or slightly undershot, but don't say 'preferable.'

MODERATOR: Since in Detroit (Oct. 8, 1974 panel) the reaction was almost the reverse to what it is here, I would like to give an opportunity to some of those panelists to respond.

CAROLYN HERBEL: My comment is that, I don't know anyone who is actually trying to breed for a scissors bite. I believe that scissors bites should not be disqualified or disapproved of so much that dogs that are otherwise really good dogs are being disqualified or heavily penalized when being shown. We have to define in our Standard the scissors bite; and if we make it disqualifying then there are a lot of really good Lhasas that are going to go down the drain that have an awful lot to offer the breed. I prefer a level bite, that's what our standard asks for; but there is so very little difference between a tight reverse scissors and a scissors, which is not level, that it is very hard to hit dead center, therefore, I feel we should define and accept a scissors bite as being allowable in our standard, with an overshot a very serious fault.

BOB: Too many people try to make a standard to fit each dog they have rather than make a standard that people shoot for. If you make a standard what you think the Lhasa should be, or hasbeen, or will be in the future, you should put it such that people strive toward it. You don't have to make it a disqualifying fault for let's say a scissors bite. Just don't mention it, if you want to leave it the other way. But don't allow it. Say things that a judge is supposed to look for in a Lhasa and let other people strive for it. Let's not make the standard to fit everyone's individual dog. I think that's what all standards have been made for.
ELLEN LONIGRO: I would like to see the overshot in our standard as a fault.

STEPHEN: I agree with Ellen, an overshot — or severely undershot mouth should be faulted. I do think that we have to define scissors bite in our standard. I think it has been left unmentioned for too long.

DOROTHY: Well I know dogs with scissors bites that were very fine dogs. They did a great deal of winning, also Best in Show winning. I am sure no one objects to a good scissors bite on an otherwise very good dog. But I am saying this, that if we continue to breed these dogs with scissors bites, I’m afraid we will eventually end up with overbites, because the scissor bite is the dominant bite. Just as nature strives to go back to the original dog, this is what will happen. We will get an elongated muzzle with a scissors bite. I think this all goes together.

PHYLLIS: I think it would be good if we could define how undershot a dog could be, because many judges disagree on this and a dog which one person thinks is slightly undershot, they put down as too undershot.

MODERATOR: Do you have any suggestions?

PHYLLIS: Not really. If the teeth show it’s too much.

This concludes Part I of the Second ALAC Forum.

LEVEL AND SCISSORS BITE. 1) Level bite with the incisors striking edge to edge. 2) Scissors bite with the upper incisors striking just along the front face of the lower ones.

OVERSHOT AND UNDERSHOT. 1) An overshot jaw with the top incisors extended out beyond the lower ones. 2) An undershot jaw with the lower incisors extending beyond the upper.

CH. HAMILTON NAMSA ROM

JANUARY 22, 1959 – MARCH 1, 1975

“Namsa” was born at Hamilton Farm, raised by Mr. Anderson, the kennelman, in his home. Mr. Anderson called him “The Boy.”

When Mr. Anderson became ill and had to go into a nursing home, he asked us to buy “The Boy.” We bought “Namsa” and took him up to visit Mr. Anderson every week until Mr. Anderson passed away.

“Namsa” was a great little show dog. One of his last appearances in the ring was when he was 10 years old. He won the Veteran’s Class at the 1969 Eastern ALAC Specialty Show.

“Namsa” has proven his worth as a stud having sired 9 champions to date. He is on the top 20 ROM Stud List.

“Namsa” was happiness and joy to many but most important he was

“OUR BOY”

He will be missed very much by us –
