A MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT...

Survey Report - Part I

I would like to thank those of you who cared enough about ALAC to take the time to complete and return the Survey form.

The total response to the Survey was 155. This figure includes 133 ALAC members and 22 non-members. Included among the ALAC members are two present officers and two past officers, three present board members and five past board members and twelve present committee representatives and six past committee representatives.

The average number of years of show participation is 8.78 years with the longest time being 25 years and the shortest 4½ months.

Twenty people have participated in obedience and they reported 25 obedience titles.

Those responding reported a total of 715 champions.

An affiliation with another dog club was reported by 113 people.

An affiliation with other breeds was reported by 63 people.

Seven AKC judges responded and the breeds these judges are eligible to judge are: Lhasa Apsos, Tibetan Terriers, Dalmatians, Keeshonden, Cairn Terriers, Shih Tzu, Bearded Collies, Bichon Frise, Briard, Chihuahua, Papillon, Brussels Griffon, Maltese and Yorkshire Terriers.

Seven professional handlers responded.

Attendance at the last three ALAC National Specialties was reported as follows: 1981: 32, 1982: 34, 1983: 57. Some reasons given for not attending are as follows:

"Didn't have a dog ready to show, and specialties are too far away."
"Distance and work schedules."
"1982 distance, 1983 weather-flight cancelled."
"Too far."
"Distance, expense and a sense that it was so political that one didn't stand a prayer of placing let alone winning."
"Why bother when the outcome is general information before the show begins?"
"Unable to reach location by car and don't fly my dog."
"Varied reasons--too far--wasn't happy with judge--bad timing."
"Time, place, judge, other shows, etc."
"I attended where there were two and one was always nearby."
"Usually too far away."
"Too far--always."
"Combination of distance and the judges."
"Distance and time of year."
"I do not think it is worth the time and expense to go any distance to a National Specialty for someone who is relatively unknown in the breed."
"I believe that the Futurities and National Specialties are set up months before. It is a sad state of affairs when we can sit at home and predict the winners months before. Unfortunately the same people always win, over and over again!"
"Have not attended enough to be qualified to comment."

CONCLUSION: The most common reasons for not attending the National Specialties are financial, distance to travel and the desire only to win. Why not to be educated, renew old friendships or make new ones, see dogs in person, support ALAC and generally enjoy a few days with other Lhasa Apso fanciers?
The following responses are to the question, "What changes, if any, would you make to the Specialty?"

"The awards ceremony and banquet should be separated from the annual business meeting."

"A little more concrete guidance to clubs with little experience."

"Change the time of the year...August is the hottest month in most locations..."

"Airlines will not ship animals when the temperatures range above a certain level...how can you plan to go to the specialty (from a great distance) and then find out that the day or week you plan to leave the airlines will not ship your dog??? May seemed to be much more pleasant time of year. The August date may tend to make the Specialty more localized...losing the benefit of a Specialty, i.e.: seeing dogs from all over the country..."

"Send more information to exhibitors earlier."

"None." (83 surveys were answered with this reply or left blank)

"Go back to regional specialties."

"Hold at least two a year."

"Encompass more days."

"Choice of regions is poor."

"Schedule Futurity for a day other than the Specialty."

"August date made it almost sure that very few people will be able to fly into the show because of expected heat at that time of the year--this should have serious consideration for the future."

"A more interesting membership meeting."

"None, I thoroughly enjoyed all of the '83 Specialty."

"Make financial guidelines available to the host clubs."

"More educational programs during the week."

"Locate Specialty centrally."

"De-politicize it as much as possible by prohibiting ALAC officers from exhibiting their dogs at the specialty. Look at who the majority of winners have been over the last few years and you have the answer to #11."
"Forbid any ALAC officer or Board Member from showing dogs they own or co-own would be a start."

"Better seminars and not at the height of the tourist season."

"More social time--not enough time to visit and get acquainted."

"Material covered in seminar's be made available to members unable to attend either in booklet form or cassette tapes."

"Maybe a "welcome--introduction type" get together. While I do not feel that specific changes are in order, I'd like to see more promotion to try and generate more participation."

"Add a Brace Class. Start conformation after obedience to avoid conflicts and encourage more future obedience entries."

"Not as cliquish people, better hospitality."

"Wherever you move it is too far away from someone unless plunk in the middle of the country."

"CONCLUSION: More than half of those people answering this question have no suggestions to change the Specialties. Most of the suggestions for change are constructive and I feel that the future host clubs should review this list when making plans for upcoming Specialties."

SUBJECT: "Do you think that the breed standards should be changed? Any comments you wish to make will be noted."

Carolyn Herbel         Marianne Nixon
Jean Kausch            Ray Sledzik
Plus Local Specialty Club representatives registered with the chairman.

Sending these comments to the above committees and sharing them with you MUST NOT give you the impression that changing the standard is being contemplated. They have been sent to the committees so that the input is merely part of those ideas to be considered as they develop their projects.

The project presently being worked on by the Breed Standard Committee is the development of a written Study of the Standard. The AKC III Phase Committee is working on the dialogue for the Slide Show Educational Program.

These comments are being shared with you so that you can appreciate how diversified the opinions and varied the points of emphasis are within the Lhasa Apso fancy. This should also help you to appreciate the challenge facing these committees in their quest to fairly represent the breed.

Report of the April, 1984, Survey:

SUBJECT: Breed Standard

"Yes, size. 'Variable, but about 10 or 11.' 11½ may be 'about' 11" but anything larger is 'about' 12" and clearly violates the intent of the standard. Anything over 11½" should be disqualified. Also I think 1½" should be reinstated for muzzle length. 20 lbs. maximum weight. Better explanation of front assembly."

"Yes, should be a height limitation."

"Not sure."

"Yes, TOPLINE, cowhocks mentioned as a fault, reference to proper movement."
"Regarding the standard the following are my comments. I did not choose to attempt to completely write a new standard, rather I have commented on the sections that I feel are most in need of change. While I do not wish to show a dog that must meet a standard that reads like a government specification, I do believe that our Lhasa standard is probably the poorest written and offering the most ways for interpretation of all the breed standards. I would like to see the word BALANCE defined and used in our standard to illustrate that a Lhasa should be balanced in appearance while standing and while in movement. To me this is a very important consideration. I believe that our standard must include a disqualification for oversized dogs. That upper limit must be specific and I do encourage the 11½" limit placed by the Canadian Standard. Regardless of size I still believe that Balance must be considered. Lhasas that look like boxes (height and length both equal) and elongated Lhasas must be diminished in approval in the judges eyes. I recently had a professional handler tell me that he thought that a Lhasa 11" tall should be a minimum of 15" long. God help us if he becomes a judge. Again, I think that the standards must stress balance. Secondly, I believe that we need a disqualification for dogs that are overshot and undershot by more than ¼ inch. There should be an immediate disqualification if the dog is overshot even slightly. The ¼ inch applies only to establish a maximum acceptable for an undershot jaw."

"???? Educate judges to the standard we now have (size)."

"Yes, should be more like Canadian standard with definite size limits."

"Yes, parts should be made more clear and description of gait should be added. Correct temperament is still unclear."

"Yes, only tightened up."

"No."

"No."

"Yes, I am in favor of a size limitation."

"No."

"No."

"Yes, I would like to have it mention pigment on eye rims and lips. I would also like it to include full dentition, teeth in a straight line, level topline and finally to call a tail a tail. I believe the words BALANCED OVERALL APPEARANCE should be included as there seem to be a lot of Lhasas with no neck and short legs or else dogs very long in body in the rings. Most importantly there should be a DISQUALIFYING HEIGHT OF 12."

"Yes, be specific on height (overall size)"

"No, should be clarified and sent to all judges."

"No, enough is enough! The present standard covers the breed well enough. To revise it further only gives in to fad and personal taste not the breed from an overall picture."

"No, just enforced by judges."

"Yes, gait: flowing, fluid movement - no roll. Size: the Lhasa is 10 to 11 inches at withers for dogs; bitches are slightly smaller (a positive statement)."

"Yes, like many others, we believe that a certain height limit should be put into the standard."

"Possibly, it seems from my observation some Lhasas almost look like Tibetan Terriers because of their height."

"Yes, size limitation."

"Yes, size!!!

No, No. We are to "preserve" and "better" the breed - not to change the standard to match what we want to breed - buy a Terrier if you want long legs and a short back."

"Yes, something too varied ex-slightly undershot bite, slightly is different to every person and judge."

"No, not particularly -- seems someone needs the change to meet their breeding not vice versa."

"Yes, believe that there should be a height disqualification of over 1½ inches."

"At this time I feel the fancy needs to pull together and regain a sense of purpose before any discussion of the standard is feasible."

"No, I feel that if the majority feels it is necessary to change the standard to better the breed then this should be considered and given great thought and voted upon. Changes could better the breed but could also go in the opposite direction."

"The only comment I would like to make on the standard deals with all the controversy over height. There has been so much emphasis on height, which happens periodically, we are losing some of the fine qualities of the breed. There should be more of an emphasis on temperament which seems to be going astray. I feel a Lhasa Apso in order to be competitive in the group and to maintain the elegance and overall balance we've strived so hard for must maintain a height of between 10½" and 11½". Males may be slightly taller but no more than 12" and females may be slightly smaller but no less than 10." Some breeders have concentrated so much on bringing down the size they are producing Lhasas that are smaller than 10" so naturally a dog within the standard looks large compared to what is starting to be shown."

"Yes - to what it was before it was changed the first time."

"Yes, disqualification for over 11½" - clearer meanings."

"No."

"I feel our Canadian standard has parts that could be implemented but I do not feel that a disqualification is necessary."

"Yes, put back size specification on muzzle at 1½ inches."

"Consideration could be given to limiting size."

"No! If we are trying to breed to the standard, then you can't keep changing the standard or your breeding program. Judges are confused enough now and may not pay any attention eventually to a standard that changes often."

"NO. It would be nice if breeders would merely hold to the present standard."

"Yes"

"No"

"Yes & No. This is a very difficult question to answer. I do and I do not feel the standard should be changed. If the standard is to be changed, then I feel that it should be a long-term study of the changes to be made and not something undertaken lightly. I feel a committee should be formed comprised of people who can work together with understanding and compassion for the breed, at least, if not for each other. I think this committee should meet and discuss rationally any and all recommendations for changes. I feel the general membership should be polled as to their recommendations. On the one hand, I feel that we should let well enough alone. On the other, I feel there are some changes I would like to see."
Our standard is very brief and I have heard feedback from many judges that it really does not say a lot and leaves too much to individual interpretation. However, if we have too many specifics, then we get into the problem of some judges only remembering one or two of the specifics and then we have problems there with that emphasis. I feel that a size disqualification would draw so much attention to that area that we would lose some other things. So, I will list some of the things I would personally like to see either more fully explained or changed. Size: No disqualification, but over 12" and under 9" a serious fault. I would like to see the terminology bitches may be slightly smaller. Mouth & Muzzle: Muzzle of medium length; in proportion to the head, a square muzzle is objectionable. Bite as it now reads. Head: I would like a comprehensive explanation of the 'skull narrow, falling away behind the eyes in a marked degree', portion. I am amazed at the number of different explanations of this part I have heard. I think it depends on the type of head that particular person has in his or her breeding program. I would like to see something about level topline somewhere, particularly while the dog is in motion. I would also like to see something about the amount of white showing in the eye. I would also like to see a serious fault for dropping the tail, especially in motion. I realize it reads 'a low carriage of stern is a serious fault,' but I have recently heard various interpretations of this as well."

"No."

"Yes, Size and temperament are my main concerns."

"On the subject of changing the standard I would first like to see what is now explicit and precise adhered to, perhaps through educating judges. This is particularly true with head and size. The description of the head in the standard is very specific yet dogs with broad domey skulls with definite stops consistently win. While the AKC visual standard program will help, this is a subject for another time. Another thought is to study the Canadian Standard. Perhaps Canadian breeders can enlighten us by telling us what effect their standard has had on their Lhasas. At the time the Canadian standard came into being, I personally thought it was a good standard, has time proved otherwise? If not, there is nothing wrong with capitalizing on their success, copying level topline, movement and/or any other area that can be of benefit to us."

"NO. I feel that the standard is very clear as it is now. I have heard suggestions as to size, gait and topline. On the size issue, I feel the standard is very explicit. While we are seeing larger Lhasas - the fault lies with Judges and Breeders, not the standard. I feel that a disqualification would be a great detriment overall and a pity! On the issues of gait and topline; I do not feel that they need to be included. I feel the standard is not for describing detail by detail what a breed looks like (all canines are similar in most ways) but rather listing the qualities that make the breed unique. I feel that our Lhasas should have a normal canine topline and a normal canine gait (with allowance for size of course) I feel it is unnecessary to mention it!"

"Not really - more definite in top of height standard."

"No."

"No concerning the standard -- the present standard is clear and easy to understand. Changing the standard at this time would only increase confusion and hurt feeling. An official explanation of the standard might be helpful. The Yorkie Club has a very good booklet explaining terms in the standard as applied to their breed. This would be helpful to judge and exhibitor alike. This should be available at a minimum fee and should be advertised widely, especially at first. I feel that there should be more emphasis upon what is correct according to the standard than personal preferences. No wonder the judges are confused and sometimes seem inconsistent in their choices!"

"No, an official ALAC interpretation should be developed and published."

"Yes, back to what it was before 1978, when our master breeders decided they were qualified to suggest changes, and currently are still foreigners to the AKC processes and ideologies."

"No."

"No. If we would all breed to the standard we already have there would be no problem and no need to change standard to suit the oversize Lhasas being shown. An official interpretation of the standard stressing the relative importance a judge should put on size, movement, fronts, heads, etc. would be helpful. If club developed a slide show for the breed this would also help judges in their tasks."

"NO Standard is CLEAR - BREEDERS MUST BREED TO IT NOT CHANGE IT."

"No - amplified maybe - wholesale change no."
"Yes A. Length of muzzle in inches - not proportions; B. 'Ideal' weight about 16 to 20 lbs (if height is about 10-11" at the withers) (See page 35 THE LHASA APSO by Frances Sefton); C. No disqualification (except the existing one) but serious fault for (1) low carriage of tail when in motion (2) improper head structure (3) height at withers under 9 1/2 or over 11-3/4" (or whatever else indicates too small or too large). I believe both an ideal height range, ideal weight range and muzzle proportion would be helpful in defining a little clearer what I believe to be the breed type of the Lhasa Apso."

"Yes, there should be a size disqualification - there are too many dogs being shown well above the suggested size."

"NO I think a detailed evaluation of the standard should be given - with notes on what breeders want and how they're getting it."

"YES, the standard needs to be more specific in many areas, and gait and expression, at least, should be added. The breed will only attain a decent standard, however, when the people involved quit thinking of themselves and their own individual dogs, and think of the good of the breed."

"I think the standard should only be changed if it really helped to improve the breed. Lately there seems to be a big controversy about the size of Lhasas. If putting a maximum and minimum size limit with disqualification for a dog outside the range would encourage or force breeders to abide by the standard then yes I would say the standard should be changed. If maximum and minimum size standards are to be incorporated in the standard first there has to be agreement as to what the limits are to be. In my opinion there is going to be a great deal of disagreement on this issue, and of course people's opinions on what the limits should be is going to be influenced by the size of the dogs they own and/or breed. I've read several articles on this problem and as the standard is written now I feel the question of size is left open to quite a bit of interpretation, especially to those people who are new to the breed and don't have years of experience with the breed to fall back on."

"Yes, be more specific on size and proportion. Also, I think the headfall should be secured in some way when showing. No Lhasa spends its life with its hair in its eyes."

"No."
"No, it is too soon after the last standard change to make another. If the AKC wants all standards to include statements of topline and gait they should be added as suggested by AKC. They certainly must be carefully worded however."

"Yes, clarify proper gait."

"Don't know."

"Yes, leave the height as is but eliminate about - leave no room to vary. State exactly what the heights should be. Also 1½" should be put back into the standard for muzzle length. We need exact #s for comparison. 1/3 the length could be a 4" muzzle and an 8" skull or a 5" muzzle and a 10" skull, etc. Also helpful would be a better description of heads to eliminate 'down faces'."

"No."

"No, size is my main concern, I don't want to see a TT size Lhasa but I don't want to see a Toy either. Conscientious breeding should take care of the problem. Judges should make their preference on size as well as other areas."

"No."

"No, unless they go back to original dogs. Don't make standard fit today's dogs."

"No No - Size should be more important as well as head & skull wording. I strongly feel that the standard should not be changed, but perhaps a little clearer, or stronger wording on some specific points, such as head in that their heads are the immediate feature than judges see. It must be a Lhasa head!"

"Only clarified as to gait."

"Yes, I feel that dogs in general are getting larger because like humans, we have better diets and better medicine available. Therefore, I would allow the Lhasa Apso a little more in height and length."

"Yes, standard is too vague."

"No."

"No!!! I think there should be a height disqualification for anything over 11½"...otherwise I feel our standard is fine right now. If the standard was enforced in the ring breeders might start following it in their breeding programs. There is no reason to change the standard all the time just because some people can't follow it."
"No."

"Bite defined with disqualifying & size disqualification."

"No, after long study of the breed (5 years) the standard is very well worded and easy to understand."

"No, regarding gait and toplines; everyone concerned with dogs even in a general way understands basic canine gait; since ours is the Lhasa Apso breed we do not aim for a Bedlington topline. Regarding rumors of adding a size disqualification; size has always been variable in our breed and probably always will be, but I think most breeders should be allowed to work towards an ideal average size and try to conform to the standard of 10-11 inches, using those dogs whose size is somewhat under or over this ideal. A standard is only a blueprint or guideline and disqualifications should not be added."

"No, an addendum in regard to gait and topline might be helpful."

"No."

"No, but if done with possible exception of strong emphasis on keeping down size, ideally 12-17 pounds, and not over 12". Emphasis on straight back, sound legs with good rear drive preferable. More emphasis on all colors being acceptable."

"No."

"It will depend on what they are going to change."

"Yes, limitations should be set on size."

"No."

"Yes, on changes of the breed standard -- I think the subject of bite should be cleared up--wording changed or clarified, so as to make it clear that even bites and undershot bites are equally important with a severe undershot bite objectionable and a scissor bite a disqualification. Scissor bites are taking away from the type of head we are looking for in a Lhasa. They are getting too snipey in the muzzles. Size is another area that needs to be cleared up. With our taller Lhasas we are getting a cleaner front shoulder line which we all like, but there has to be a limit to the size that is allowed. More often than not a large Lhasa is put up over an equally nice small Lhasa simple because of size, with the small Lhasa being closer to the standard. I feel that an 11½" limit should be stated and anything over 12" be disqualified as too tall. I also feel the statement 'bitches slightly smaller' should be eliminated. I also feel some statement should be made to address the length of bodies, too many are getting too long in body. Something has to be done to our standard too so East, West and Midwest Lhasas look alike. A Doberman is a Dobe in any part of the country, but the Lhasas are as different as night and day in the East, West and Midwest. Long and low, small and low, pea size, short and cobby and big and coarse. We have to have a standard everyone can breed to and come up with a consistent Lhasa in all parts of the country."

"Yes, 'Preferred' size, but not a disqualification on size. The poodle is an example. I would not want this to happen to Lhasas."

"I think that oversize should be listed as a major fault...most breeds in the ring today are experiencing the same problem...i.e. the dogs being shown are for the most part oversize and the 'in standard' dogs look like midgets! The size problem has been well published...somehow, the judges seem to be missing the point...maybe a statement is needed in the standard before they will acknowledge the proper size."

"No."

"I am still debating this in my mind."

"Yes/no I have mixed emotions about standard changes. On the one side I don't like to see our Lhasas getting so big nor so tiny as some bitches are but then again I see conformation improved so-00-00. I just don't know. All things equal I like the smaller Lhasa 9½-10" for bitches 10½" to 11" for dogs. Am I the only one with seesawing feelings? I feel that ALAC should have something sent to judges for educational purposes. Look how long it took to educate them after our last change in '75 about color!"

"Yes, I would like our standard as complete as the Dandie Dinmont standard. So it leaves little open for personal interpretation."

"We have to be careful that we don't create judging by faults or exceptions instead of overall dog."

"I believe we all realize that any standard should be as clear and concise so as to provide a judge with pertinent information so that he can make a determination as to which dog among many most closely approaches what the standard calls for. When considering any change to a standard, I would hope the changes were not wordy thereby leading to confusion. If changes are presented I would also hope that they be changes that give a clearer 'picture' of what our Lhasas should be. In a Lhasa, gait is difficult to put into words, due, I believe, to the heavy coats. I find defining gait to be indeed difficult for myself although I know what I enjoy looking at as a Lhasa is moving. Toplines could be defined perhaps by emphasizing the word level and focusing in on the short fronts."

"No."

"? Perhaps local discussion groups on this would clear some minds—including mine."

"No, not really changes, but on some points clarified and perhaps more in the AKC style."

"Yes, size limits seem to be indicated. Ours is one of the least specific standards around."

"No, I believe the standard is now sufficient to judge dogs on as it stands. The only trouble with the standard is there are too many special interest groups with an ax to grind on specific parts of the standard. I also feel there are a select few people who would like to see their dogs and the qualities of these dogs in the standard. The size question has been so overworked (and I feel aimed at specific breeders) that when judges are judging specific dogs, the most important question in their minds should be proportions not size. Also as far as size is concerned, who is going to educate the general dog fancy as to where the measurements will take place. I have heard several methods of measuring and feel we could take a lesson from our Canadian counterparts. The height disqualification lasted less than a year up there. We as breeders should be aware of the problem and as breeders who are 'breeding to the standard' as everyone would be aiming to take this into consideration in our breeding programs."

"Yes, level topline - standard is too vague - what about gait? No over-angulation - definite bite (mouth) - size also - too large - too small."

"No, please try to breed to the one we've got."

"Yes, height 11½" maximum."

"No, I think that if we disqualify 12" dogs we will end up with more 11-3/4" dogs than we have now."

"No, perhaps amended."
"If goal is to benefit breed - not individual people. Needs to be more detailed."

"It should be clarified."

"Yes, basically only so judges will know proper gait."

"No all members should be polled with similar questionnaires and asked to participate in accordance with the precepts they accepted on joining the club (ALAC). Statements by a person (such as Page Elliott, Curtis Brown, etc.) starting with the premise the standard was written by knowledgeable (and students) of canine anatomy and kinetics, the standard tells where the Lhasa differs from other coated breeds and peculiar to the Lhasa Apso."

"NO, I feel that those with large Lhasas are wanting height change!"

"NO, last time we changed heads - that is when size became a problem!"

"Yes, I don't think we should have a size disqualification if it means not being able to show our puppies. I feel that so many things have become excepted that I'm afraid we will lose what a Lhasa should be. I think people have started worrying too much about what the judges are picking this month, etc., and are really losing sight of what the Lhasa is really supposed to be."

"NO I AM AGAINST INCLUDING ANY DISQUALIFYING STATEMENTS IN ANY AREA OF THE STANDARD! If we are having problems with a particular aspect of the standard I think that the language can be made strong enough, without disqualifications, so that judges will know what should be unacceptable in the ring. It should not be necessary to start 'throwing people out of the ring' to make judges aware of what we want. Also, any committee to formulate any changes MUST develop better communication with the general membership regarding any changes."

"Yes, size should be limited as it now is in Canada."

"Yes, changes suggested for the standard. Some of these should be known, but from seeing some of the dogs being shown we have doubts that some understand the standard and basic canine conformation and others can't maintain the standard so simply show what they have and if possible try to change the standard to agree with what they are breeding. Height - no disqualification, make wording more definite, i.e., ideally 10 to 11 inches at the shoulders for dogs, bitches slightly smaller. Body Shape - mention of correct top line. Mention of depth of chest, i.e., in relationship to elbows. Mouth & Muzzle - mention of snipey muzzle as objectionable (distorts proper Lhasa look). Mention of muzzle being level-not down (as in Canadian Standard). Eyes - describe almond. Ears - mention position in relationship to rest of head (eyes). Legs - reword to forelegs straight when viewed from front. Mention length of shoulder blade to upper arm also do not give exact dimensions is 45 degree layback."

"Yes disqualification limit. I would like to see it 9½ to 11½."

"No."

"Yes, I do not think the breed standard should be so much changed as clarified. I think size should be more clearly outlined (height as well as substance.) Just because a dog may measure in at a perfect height, he is not the correct 'size' if he is really fine or heavy boned. Size means more than just height. I also wish judges would be more educated about the total standard. For example, some judges like dogs with a really beautiful rear. That dog can be really unsound in other areas, but he still will win because he has one isolated feature. Judges should judge the total dog, not one small part. They have to take into account our whole standard, not whatever little section they feel like. Also, I think topline and movement should be discussed in our standard."

"No, at this time it is far too HOT of a subject—let it cool. As for the standard change I am against it at this time as it has caused a lot of upset and some friends are now bitter enemies. I think it might be wise to cool it a while and then again after you find out what the MAJORITY OF MEMBERS want as I see it no change is worth the loss of ALAC."

"No, the subject of the breed standard should be laid to rest. The standard, I feel, is descriptive enough and leaves it's interpretation to the judge as it should be. The publication of unbiased comments on the Standard would serve to further educate judges but as far as I've seen, each writer that I have seen published has tried to push his breeding as the only 'True,' 'Type', 'Sized,' or 'Pedigreed.'"

"No, if AKC won't consider disqualifications, what's the point. On the other hand, if AKC wants each breed to include reference to gait and topline in the respective standards, then the AKC should make the request in writing to each breed club. The breed clubs should draft recommended language which should then be approved by the general membership.
Besides which, we just changed the Lhasa standard a couple of years ago. If AKC wanted these things included, why didn't they say so then?"

"Yes, I feel the 1 1/4" muzzle should be back in the standard. I see too many Lhasas with the correct 1/3-2/3 proportion but with muzzles 2-2 1/2" long which is not correct."

"Not necessarily."

"Yes, movement, size, topline a cl (sic)."

"Yes, I feel the breed standard should be changed. Being active in an all-breed club obviously gives you good for thought when around ringside, friends ask you if all the Lhasas in the ring are the same breed. I never admit that I often feel that way myself! The size and skull planes bother me the most, structurally. Then I've often wondered what a Lhasa is supposed to do with its straight front legs as the standard does not even indicate that they are supposed to move them. I feel a goodly number of breeders have concerned themselves exclusively creating "coat machines" that they have totally lost the dog that indeed is underneath. Always you hear interpretation of the breed standard, but we are supposed to be breeding Lhasas, not Tibetans or Shih Tzus. I do feel that this will take time as many will feel threatened by change, they always do. However, if the Board takes action on this issue in a responsible manner and makes the membership feel a vast part of such an issue, things will change."

Carolyn A. Herbel, President

NOTICE REGARDING SELECTION OF SPECIALTY JUDGES

Enclosed is a list of AKC eligible Lhasa Apso judges as provided by Dale Peterson. This list is provided as the first step in the membership's selection of specialty judges. Each member may select up to ten preferred judges and forward this list to the Secretary by December 25, 1984. (See August, 1984, ALAC minutes (forthcoming under separate cover) for full explanation of judge selection procedure.)

NOTICE REGARDING MAILING LABEL

If an error appears in your name, address, telephone number (including missing area code) as it appears on the label on this Quarterly, please forward a postcard to the Secretary as soon as possible indicating the changes/corrections to be made. In addition, if you know of a current member who is not receiving ALAC correspondence, please advise them to forward a postcard to the Secretary as soon as possible.
REPORT OF THE Obedience Committee

By the time this report is in print, the second ALAC Obedience Trial will be history, hopefully history made by one of our hairy friends having qualified for it's obedience title or at least for a leg toward it's title.

Most of the goals that we set for this year in obedience have been met but there are a couple of areas where we need help or improvement.

During the past year, we have received many inquiries from both ALAC and non-ALAC people concerning many facets of obedience training and obedience trials and we have endeavored to provide as much information as we have available to all. Out of approximately 25 persons who we contacted who were actually showing Lhasas, only 4 or 5 were contacted through information provided by ALAC members. Each ALAC member would be doing our club a great favor if they would be on the lookout for people showing Lhasas in obedience and send their names and address to either the Obedience Committee or the club Secretary so they may be contacted and be made aware of the national club and it's goals.

Another area that needs improvement is in placing the Obedience Trained Dog in it's proper place and perspective in the national club. In most cases, the accomplishments of these dogs are placed somewhere between Junior Showmanship and the added footnotes. The fact must be recognized that dogs that earn their titles in Obedience are on the same plane as dogs who earn titles in conformation and are entitled to recognition as such.

Now is the time to begin training your entry for the ALAC '85 Obedience Trial. Keep in mind that the champion that's been laying around for the last year or two will make an ideal candidate for this training. The dog has already been conditioned to the ring, crowds, the need for discipline, and in most cases, enjoys showing off. Besides, if he's been laying around for awhile, the exercise and activity will probably do him a world of good.

SEMANTICS

Language is a tool, a tool which should be used accurately and honestly, especially in advertising whether it be for a product or an animal. Truth in advertising indicates honesty, conformity to fact or to reality, veracity, true statement, and undisputed fact. To do other than this is to be dishonest. To use the language in a manner which implies something which is not, true is dishonest. Thus, those of us who exhibit and who breed have a special chore--to be careful of the language we use in ads.

We all have seen puppy ads in newspapers and magazines which state champion-sired or champion-line. Often, if we check, neither is really true, but the general public does not know this. The first is very obvious; the puppies must be sired by a champion for it to be true. The question then concerns the definition of a "champion-line." It would necessarily indicate a pedigree which revealed numerous champions, who were themselves related. It would be interesting to know your definition of "champion-line."

Sometimes a word is used inaccurately, a word which implies that which is not true. Dog people seem to use "multi" in just that way. "Multi," according to the dictionaries, means much or many; while "multiple" is defined as consisting or characterized by many parts. The antonyms for "multi" and "multiple" are few, scarce, rare. To go a step further, "many" is an adjectival designation of great indefinite number, and "much" indicates a great quantity.

To use "multi" when a dog has two or three BISs or Group wins, is just not accurate. There are only a handful of Lhasas who barely qualify to use "multi BIS." One qualifying dog who readily comes to mind is the Scottish Terrier Shannon. For Shannon, winner of over 125 BIS awards, "Multi BIS" is not hyperbole!

Let us be very proud of what our Lhasas accomplish, and let us also advertise these accomplishments with integrity.
