BISS AM CAN CH SHO TRU HYLAN STETSON
AM CAN CH HYLAND HOSHIRA SHO TRU FEDORA
Dear Members:

Hope the New Year will fulfill your greatest expectations - if you set your sights too high, you may be disappointed; if too low, you won’t realize your true potential. Better too high, than too low! Some of you surpassed your 1991 goals, I’m sure - Lhasas did well overall, and some spectacularly.

Lhasa love the cold weather - remember to keep them dry, though - the dampness is harder for them to cope with. Watch those streets and roads with salt on them, very hard on your Lhasa feet: dry skin is a problem with heated houses, maybe you’d do well to try supplements designed to help.

I had sent a copy of proposed changes for the Specialty/Futurities for the last Bulletin, but due to inaccuracies, it wasn’t published; please check your minutes carefully to see current proposals. ALAC depends on members being well-informed - check all mailings thoroughly, and read the minutes ... then you won’t have to say you didn’t know what was happening. Your opinion does count, and you must make your wishes known to those Officers and Board Members.

See you in New York?

Sincerely,

Joan

We are proud to be able to continue to retain our distinct Lhasa type, true double coated Lhasas of moderate size. And show across the country year after year. Specialties are the true proving grounds of the breed today. The competition is always at its Highest in Quality.

We are equally as proud of our Lhasa making their mark in Canada, Australia, New Zealand, Argentina, Mexico, Denmark, Finland, England, France, Holland, Italy, and the USA.

We will continue our Best with new comers as well as our many valued old friends. A few young Champions will be available for sale or co-ownership reasonably in 1992.

Dog Food Storage

A representative for one of the natural dog foods cautions against taking the food out of the bag and keeping it in a container which has rubber as a constituent. Seems the rubber reacts unfavorably on the vitamins (A and E) which are used as preservatives in the natural foods.

Also a factory representative for another Dog feed cautioned not to put dog food in a metal container.

It was suggested that fiberglass containers are perhaps the safest thing to use. But the best yet might be to leave the food in the original bag and put that in a lidded container if desired.

Breed Standard Committee Report
Norman L. Herbel, Chair

Re: The committee’s next project and culmination of “Guide”

The Breed Standard Committee’s next project will be to discuss the matter of color choices for AKC registration papers. The results will be presented to the ALAC Board for their consideration and action.

Concerning thee Breed Standard “Guide” I will proceed as previously instructed by board action which means my next step is to print and circulate the completed “GUIDE”.

If you have any concerns or disagreements consider yourself in the rare minority as every member of the Board voted to accept and mail this "GUIDE" to the membership which resulted in 157 yes to 28 no votes to accept. I will not be patient with, nor address any rumors of action of disapproval as this is the effort of 6 years of extensive work and reflects the efforts of experience, History, knowledge and patience. This "GUIDE" is universally accepted and will stand alone on it’s merits. It has been described by every positive adjective I have ever heard from the American Kennel Club to the novice owner.

I am very pleased and protective of the committee and their product. They have performed a small miracle and my sincere gratitude and admiration goes out to these pillars of the Breed.

Thank you to the old Board members and the new for your patience and dedicated concern. We have produced and excellent “GUIDE” that is comparable to the marvelous AKC video.

My sincere hope is to once again see the Lhasa Apso take his rightful place among the ranks of Group and Best-In-Show winners with a support that goes beyond the owner and handlers.

Again, my sincere gratitude to all.

The AKC “Limited Registration”, allows dogs to be registered as a pet not to be used for breeding purposes and not to be shown. No offspring out of the “Limited Registered” dog or bitch can be registered. However, the Canadian Kennel Club will not recognize this “Limited Registration” in Canada and will not allow these pets to be registered.

Did you know? ....
“Chicken” is shown going Winner’s Bitch and Best of Opposite at the Heart of America K.C. for a 3-pt. major and a NEW CHAMPIONSHIP. Thank You Judge Carlos A. DeBango.

Chicken will soon be bred to the handsome Ch. Light Up’s Red Alert, a blending of two beautiful Red Golds.

To know Chicken is to love her!

AKC NEWS RELEASE .............

BEST FRIENDS to air on TWA and Continental flights

Starting in December, AKC's BEST FRIENDS, a six minute video depicting the tremendous and necessary work dogs provide our society, will be shown on TWA and Continental airline flights.

BEST FRIENDS will be shown on TWA Westbound domestic and international flights, including those from London to New York. It will also be shown on Continental Eastbound flights, including flights from New York to London, Paris, and Frankfurt.

AKC's goal is to send a positive message to the general public on the many ways dogs help us on a day to day basis, as well as educate the general public about responsible dog ownership and combating the dog population problem.

AKC is very excited about this new development and is working on more airline exhibition spots for the future.
Congratulations

Fleetfire has bred and/or owned forty Lhasa champions to date. Success, however, is measured by more than this. To share knowledge, to be a part of another fancier's foundation, to make long-lasting friendships — these also determine success.

LHASA JUDGES - RATINGS & PREFERENCE REPORT

If you want to save money and show your Lhasa where he or she can win, you need the Lhasa Judge Rating Report.

Our ratings, based on a Judge's constituency of placement, go from the best rating of 1, to the poorest rating of 5. We used a numeric code to define a Judge's preference in nine different categories:

Size, Style, Movement, Temperament, Head, Structure, Coat, Mouth and Tail.

These preferences are based on the importance a Judge may place on a specific category, or what a Judge prefers such as SIZE: Small size, Larger size or Moderate size Lhasas.

Cost of the REPORT, rating 330 Judges, is just $6.00

Tis the season to be cautious .. with your pets...

In the midst of preparing for the holidays, there are hazards which endanger your pet's lives. Here are a few safety precautions to prevent such disasters from occurring.

* Hang tinsel and Christmas balls out of the reach of paws and claws.
* Don't allow pets to chew on pine needles, light cords, rinhorns or bows.
* Mistletoe, holly, poinsetta leaves, chocolate and turkey bones can be fatal.

KENWOOD DIogenES

Makes his mark with back-to-back wins at the Hatboro and Devon KC Shows

Thank you Mrs. Ann Hearn for Donny’s 4 point, Best of Winners major at Hatboro KC. Next day under Italian Judge Dr. Giuseppe Benelli, our boy added another 2 points going Winners Dog, thank you.

To Wendy Poquette who filled in for Donny’s regular handler Judy Hearney thank you for the excellent job. Judy was not to be out done handling Donny to perfection at the Devon show. We wish to pay tribute to Donny and his sister Kenwood Helen of Troy’s grandfather .... CH. Orlane’s Inimitable who recently passed away. We are proud to carry on the bloodline of one of the greatest stud dogs in Lhasa History.

away SCIENCE DIET
In her critique following her judging of the Lhasa Apso Club championship show at Easter, Mrs Wendye Slatyer had some very important things to say about our breed. I hope that everyone who has true interest in the breed, whether as a breeder, exhibitor or besotted owner has read, and noted, what she said.

Firstly, she made specific reference to her four top placegetters as “excelling in the hallmarks which make Lhasa so special”. They were: BIS Ch Palfrey Turlu; Runner-up BIS: Ch Nahemja Miz Minnie; Reserve dog: Ch Suekerbru Sammy Deejay; Reserve bitch: Ch Delderland Tiffany. Two brindles and two golds. Sharing some common ancestry, but basically a mixture of bloodlines.

Although individual dogs and bitches in a pedigree may have some influence, at this stage in Lhasa Apsos in Australia we must assess their value on what Lhasa characteristics are they contributing to the breed.

Mrs Slatyer goes on to say: “As with all breeds at present, the trend seems to be away from the original, unique, distinctive hallmarks and movement (my emphasis) peculiar to a certain type of construction, and towards super showmen with lots of glamour and pizzazz. The biggest, fastest, hairiest, most glamorous animals undoubtedly have impact and catch the eye of many judges, but please preserve true Lhasa type at all costs.

“To me, Lhasas, like Afghans, are amongst the most specialized breeds - they initially appealed because of their rarity and the fact that they were developed in an isolated environment and harsh geographic climate, for a specific purpose - they were ‘different’ - hopefully they will continue to be so.”

I too hope that Lhasas will continue to be “different”. That is what attracted me to them in the first place. I like their self-contained, wise temperament, their disdain for strangers, their stubbornness when you ask them to do stupid things, like come when called.

As a judge, I don’t want an over-trained or drugged automaton. I want a real live dog. As an exhibitor (which I hope to be once again after a 15 year lapse!) I am prepared to put up with naughtiness in my puppy. One day it’ll get the idea. I can wait, because I want it to end up with CHARACTER - Lhasa character. So the brute decides to dig its toes in today. That’s life. That’s Lhasa.

As a breeder I want to breed Lhasa Apsos, not something with the characteristics of another breed. I want the Lhasa temperament. I want the Lhasa size. I want the Lhasa head, eye and expression. I want the Lhasa easy-care coat, both for me and for my puppy people. I want Lhasa health and hardiness.

I do not care what colour my Lhasas come in. Colour is of the least importance, and none is “characteristic” of the breed.

I do not particularly want “everybody’s friend” temperament, or “showing fools: although those can be useful if one is really an exhibitor, not a Lhasa breeder or connoisseur. If I’d wanted that sort of dog I’d have chosen another breed, like a gundog, or a terrier, or a Chihuahua.

I do not want great big fluffy bouffant coats, because I do not want to spend hours and hours on a coat more suitable for a Shih Tzu. I do not want great big round eyes looking at me like lamplights, and prone to problems of irritation and ulceration. I do not want weak underjaws that look like a shark’s head.

I do not want exaggerated rear ends that flail up and down like windmills, and put the dog’s stability at risk and bring the potential of unsoundness becoming fixed in the breed.

In the past few years I have judged Lhasa Apsos in several different parts of the world. It is a terrible thing to say, but I was so disappointed the last time I judged the breed in Britain. I could not believe that in an entry of nearly 200 there were so few that I could have taken home with me. So many were constructionally flawed, and had no quality, quite apart from lacking breed characteristic underneath the masses of impeccably presented coat was mediocrity.

Only in Scandinavia did I find a better percentage of dogs that retained a goodly amount of true type. But even there the rot is setting in and glamour is taking over. Tall, bony, angular dogs, with slab sides and yards of glistening golden coat and exaggerated gait seemed to have increased since my previous visit.

There is nothing wrong with glamour. Our breed well presented is glamourous but glamour is NOT the total dog. Get the dog right and then add the icing on the cake - gorgeous coat preparation and ring presentation.

Of course the problem of untypical flashy dogs in a breed is not confined the Lhasa Apsos, nor is it confined to our times. Here are some extracts from an article written 25 years ago by the late Dr E S Montgomery, a well-known American judge and terrier man.

“Condition, immaculateness of presentation, trimming of coat, showmanship - how important are they? In the exhibition ring, all are assets, with showmanship the inestimable one. A poorly conditioned dog, a thin dog, a dog with an untidy coat - these do and should penalise the dog, but not negate his winning if he has other guns with which to win.

“Type, soundness, balance, quality - these are the virtues that should outshine showmanship and condition and protect the dog and the bitch with the greater merit in the breed and for the breed...

“Beauty is only skin deep - I add... so is ugliness! But in dogs, beauty is only partially external: much beauty is under the skin - the bones, musculature, angulation of the joints, natural bodily outlines, the strength, the power, the temperament and the character.

“Priceless as the glamour arising from ring presence and showmanship is, it must never dominate breed type, breed conformation and breed character! Manmade qualities, however appealing, must never diminish the importance of type or render insignificant poorly made second thighs, weak hocks and wobbly rear ends. Pronounced turn of quarters is more important than clever handling that hurries a dog with great speed to disguise faults and weakness in hind action. A lack of showmanship repels all too many judges. Likewise, ring showmanship lures equally too many judges. Both groups are wrong! Lack of showmanship should be penalised only when all other points of comparison to the standard of perfection are equal...!”

We all need to think carefully about the future of our breed. For the exhibitor, showmanship is important; but the dog itself should be typical of its breed, sound in construction, and in temperament.

So we come to the responsibility of the breeder. I say, if you do not have the future soundness and stability of our breed at heart, do not breed. If you do not know, or care, enough about breed type, then don’t breed.

Breeding dogs is not for novices, or ego-trippers. It involves lots of expense, difficult decisions and often heartache, and a willingness to go on learning. It is not a weekend occupation, but a lifetime’s devotion.

FINDERS KEEPERS?

Guidelines for lost, found and abandoned pets

The lettering is usually crude, but the sentiment is obviously heartfelt. Handmade "lost dog" or "lost kitten" posters, stapled to telephone poles and taped on store windows, are distressingly common.

The lucky animals—those who aren’t hit by cars or put to death in a crowded city animal shelter—are taken in, at least temporarily, by people who try to find them homes. Unfortunately, such Good Samaritans can sometimes end up in legal trouble.

Veterinarians’ responsibilities

In most cases, a veterinarian is under no legal duty to take in or treat an ownerless or injured animal. Of course, many veterinarians do treat strays that wonder in just because they love animals.

Some states reimburse a veterinarian a nominal amount for taking in a sick or injured stray. The state of Maine will pay a veterinarian who accepts a stray or abandoned dog $2.50 a day for eight days -- hardly enough to pay for the food bill, not to mention the time and treatment.

A veterinarian may humanely destroy a pet without the owner’s consent only in an emergency. If, for example, a critically injured animal is taken to a veterinarian, and the owner is unknown or unreachable, the veterinarian will not be held liable for damages for euthanizing the animal.

The Maine statute also includes a procedure for a veterinarian to follow when making such a decision. It required the veterinarian to authorize euthanasia in writing and to:

- Keep the dog for at least 48 hours (unless the dog is severely injured or sick);
- Notify the city clerk;
- Decide the dog does not appear to have rabies; and
- Decide the dog’s recovery, given reasonable time and reasonable care, is doubtful.

A veterinarian who meets all these requirements is protected from a lawsuit if the owner turns up and tries to sue over the dog’s death.

While not required by law in other states, it’s a smart idea for any veterinarian to follow these steps and keep written records to show what was done. Otherwise they could find themselves faced with a lawsuit by an angry and grieving owner, even though they had the best of intentions.

Abandoned pets

Some owners bring pets to a veterinarian, leave them and never return. Many state laws now set out a procedure for veterinarians to follow in such situations.

California law, for example, deems an animal abandoned if its owner doesn’t pick it up within 14 days of a previously agreed to date. The veterinarian must try, for at least 10 days, to find a home for the animal, before they may humanely destroy it. The veterinarian may not turn the dog over to a pound or let it be used for scientific experimentation. Pet owners are to be notified of these rules by a prominent sign in the office or a conspicuous notice on a receipt.

Advising clients

It is advisable for the veterinarian to post appropriate state and city codes in their clinic’s waiting room or to print them in the clinic’s newsletter. The general public should at the very least consider the following advice:

If a stray turns up on a client’s doorstep, they are not free to decide that “finders are keepers.” Laws in most places require that stray animals be turned over to animal control authorities, who are responsible for trying to find the owner. If the finder want to keep the animal, they can ask for the first chance at adoption.

The client should not, unless there is an emergency, take it upon themselves to have a stray animal destroyed. This could make them legally liable to the animal’s owner.

For example, a Louisiana man found a sick puppy, which wasn’t wearing a collar, in the front yard while he was visiting his father. He took the puppy to a veterinarian and, given a discouraging prognosis, two days later asked the veterinarian to humanely destroy the dog. When the dog’s owners found out, they sued and won the value of the dog.

Even if the finder is not required to notify the pound, they must try to find the owner. If they don’t, they could be liable to the owner for the animal’s value.

They may figure that if a stray looks like it hasn’t had a good meal or a bath in a while, it’s unlikely that an owner is worried about it. But appearances can be deceiving.

Take the case of Fluffy, a 10-year-old dog found wandering, filthy and underfed, in a California town. A woman named Shirley Carlson found the dog, bathed it and paid for a veterinary exam, which turned up a heart problem, worms and eye and ear infections. Both Carlson and the veterinarian concluded the dog was a homeless stray. They didn’t see the flyers or newspaper ads offering a $5,000 reward from Ronald Fishman, Fluffy’s owner.

Carlson kept Fluffy for several months, until she had to enter the hospital for surgery. A friend took the dog to a shelter in San Francisco, not understanding that the shelter did not offer temporary care. The shelter, believing Fluffy had been surrendered and was too old and sick to be adopted, put the dog to sleep.

When Fishman finally found out what had happened to his dog, he sued Carlson, her friend and the shelter. The court, however, dismissed the case, stating that while it sympathized with Fishman’s loss of his beloved dogs it did not want to penalize people who come to the rescue of needy animals.

The bottom line is that it is important to check with all appropriate local officials (animal shelters, sheriff’s office, county clerk, etc.) before making decisions about a pet that appears to be a stray.

Advice for clients

FINDING THE OWNER

If only good intentions were enough. If a client asks how to handle a stray they have found, the following tips may help avoid a legal fight:

- Check to see if the animal has a license tag. Then call the animal control department and get the owner’s name.
- Inquire about the animal by talking to people who live near where it was found.
- Put a notice in the newspaper, and notifying local radio stations.
- Post signs near where the animal was found.

Never assume the finder may simply keep the animal or that they are free to have it destroyed. Check with the local animal shelter, law enforcement, county clerk, etc. before taking any action.

LHASA SPECIALTY - DAY BEFORE WESTMINSTER K C

With the Westminster KC now a Specials Only show, we offer the opportunity for class Lhasa’s to compete in the First Lhasa Specialty of 1992. Not only will we attract the best Lhasa Specials in the country, entered for the Westminster KC show but also class Lhasas vying for majors to complete their championship.

Empire Alliance Specialties is composed of 14 independent Specialty clubs that will have their specialty shows under one roof. This will be our club’s second annual Empire show. Last year we drew over 80 Lhasas. This year we expect well over 100.

The show will take place on SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 9, 1992. The place is the pier at 55th Street and Hudson River. There is ample parking on the pier’s roof. MBF will be the show superintendent. There will be more room for exhibitors this year as the show is split into two days.

Our judges include an all time favorite and a breeder-owner for our sweeps.

MARGARET YOUNG RENIHAN ----- BREED JUDGE

SARAH LAWRENCE ----- SWEEPSTAKE JUDGE

You won’t want to miss this opportunity to see the best of the Eastern Lhasas and we are told a number of West Coast and Southwest Lhasas will also be entered.

For information about the show, or to be placed on our mailing list for the Specialty Premium List contact any of the following listed below.

Having your own set of jumps for Open A is a must. Practicing more than once a week in class is a must. When my husband, Glenn knew I was interested in training Ming, (our Lhasa Apso) for Open A, he built our own set of jumps.

The first problem was finding a dumbbell Ming liked. His bite is a little off, so we tried several dowels to find one he was comfortable holding. Then we had to try several different sizes of bells. We discovered Ming did not like his nose to touch the ground. He was finally happy with 2 1/2" bells. I put off using the ear pinch as I did not want to hurt Ming. He has a very low pain threshold and would have screamed if I hurt him. I finally gave him one light ear pinch while practicing in our dining room and he seemed to understand. (He did not cry). Once he understood what I wanted, we were on the right track. I NEVER pinched his ear again.

I ALWAYS used Ming's name before any command in practice and in the shows. "Ming heel", "Ming Come", "Ming down", etc. At one show Ming did not leave my side when I sent him on the flat retrieve. The judge said I gave my command too fast and that I should "draw it out." That advice paid off. Since then I have stretched Ming's name out on ALL commands and it worked: "M - I - N - G come!"

To practice the long sits and downs at home, I would sit Ming (and down Pong) in the living room while I fixed their dinner in the kitchen. I timed them for five minutes. Dinner was their reward.

Ming has always worked well for food. (Glenn calls him "the walking belly"). One of our trainers did not believe in using food until she saw how well it worked with Ming, then she decided to use it.

We were very late in learning "Attention". Now I know, that "Attention" is the foundation of obedience. Once I got Ming to "watch me" we progressed swiftly. We began lessons at home with Ming sitting at heel position. I would say "watch me". Once I had his attention (usually with a treat in my hand), I'd say "Ming heel", then we would walk a few steps, stop, then another "watch me". When he obeyed he would get a treat.

The drop on recall was our greatest challenge! If there was a way to blow this exercise, Ming found it. In five shows we would have earned a leg, except Ming blew the drop. Of course he would do the exercise right at home, but at the shows it was like he was laughing at me.

Our first try at Open A was November 10, 1990. Ming qualified with a high score. Glenn and I thought getting Ming's C.D.X. would be a snap. How wrong we were!

Last winter we took two months off from practice when Ming sustained a soft tissue injury from landing wrong going over the high jump. He spent lots of time with a heating pad on his shoulder and loved it! At that point I decided not to go for a Utility title. That would mean many more months of jumping, and Ming is too precious to risk another injury.

ADOA'S HOW TO RESPOND TO ANTI-DOG ENFORCEMENT

The officers, directors, and executive committee of the American Dog Owners Association feel that it would be appropriate and helpful to many members living in today's world of restrictions, control, and harassment to publish the following for your guidance. Please save this for future reference and let this be your guide when someone comes to your door.

You do not have to allow anyone into your house without a proper search warrant.

Suggested steps to be taken in the event of local anti-dog enforcement.

The following text outlines methods of inquiry and enforcement which may be used by local officials in attempts to enforce anti-dog ordinances in your community and suggested techniques of response. These techniques are entirely legal and based upon the rights of citizens as stated by the U.S. Constitution.

A. Telephone inquiry or threat: You may receive telephone inquiries concerning the number of dogs you own and whether any dogs or puppies are for sale. Other questions may also be asked.

Your response should be to inquire, "Are you interested in a puppy?" If the answer is, "Yes", ask that person for his name, address, and phone number. Suggests that you or a responsible breeder will contact that person at a more convenient time for you.

Keep a written record of the date and time of each phone call and all the information that was requested by you and the caller. Keep these records with your dog records so that they may be referred to in the future.

Under no circumstances should you volunteer information or admit any action which may be in violation of the ordinances over the telephone. You should not attempt to mislead or otherwise lie to a caller nor should you treat such a caller with any more respect than you would a magazine salesman. You do not have to incriminate yourself under the 5th Amendment of the U.S. Constitution and you should certainly not make such statements over the telephone.

Do not bother to call back to verify identities or information simply because you are requested to (you are under no obligation to spend money to aid a criminal investigation of yourself).

If the answer is friendly and genuinely inquisitive, invite the person out to look at your puppies.

If the question is asked, "What price is each puppy being sold for?", simply say that puppies of this type are being sold for between x dollars and y dollars in price. Never say that you are selling them.

If the answer is, "Yes", ask that person for his name, address, and phone number. Suggests that you or a responsible breeder will contact that person at a more convenient time for you.

If your conversation indicates that the person is representing the county clerk's office or allegedly representing an official body, ask the caller for:
- His full name, phone number
- The agency he represents
- His badge number
- Why he is there to see you
- If there is any complaint involved
- Who made these complaints (he probably won't answer)
- Whether he has a warrant for a search
- Request a copy of that warrant (probably he won't have one)
- Why the inquiry is being made
- How your name and phone number was obtained
- Nature of the inquiry (what is it about)

If you feel that a search of your home will lead to threatened confiscation of a dog or a criminal complaint you should refuse entry to your house unless the sheriff or police are present with a search warrant. If he says hat the can get that easily, then tell him to so. Remain cool and polite. Call your attorney as soon as possible.

A Guide To Your Rights

If you are faced with a threatened seizure without court hearing or court order, call the police immediately. Also obtain the names of all persons involved, including the police officers. This may prevent seizure. Please understand that seizure of property, without due process of law should include a court hearing.

Call your attorney at the time of threatened seizure and ask him to help you. Do not answer any questions from the police without legal advice. Do not offer any explanations regardless of what they may be (police and enforcement officials have a bad habit of misinterpreting such explanations). Remember, everything you say can and will probably be used against you. Do not volunteer any dogs or other property.

Call other breeders in the area to warn them and inform them of the occurrence.

C. Cooperation: Remember that cooperation will not usually avoid prosecution. Also remember that seizure of one of your dogs without court action, under protest, amounts to prosecution without a trial. I repeat, anything you say or do in regard to the attempted seizure or inquiries may be used against you in a criminal or quasi-criminal action. Everything you say or do will probably be used against you. Write down everything that is said and occurs as it happens or as soon after as you can. These notes can be valuable evidence to defend yourself at a later time.

Try to avoid anger and avoid violence at all costs. Try to obtain as much information as you can: the informers, enforcing officials, officers, etc. Require enforcing officials to put everything in writing. They may not do it, but you can ask.

Do not be afraid and remember you must assert your rights to protect them. If you are responsibly breeding and owning dogs and not creating a nuisance or an unsafe situation for others, then you are conducting a wholesome activity in raising high-quality pets and hobby animals. Dogs are not evil or criminal by themselves. Dogs are one of man's oldest companions. Do not feel ashamed of your activity and do not admit the so-called "responsibility" of purebred breeders for stray dogs or unhealthy conditions in other parts of the city.

Do you belong to ADOA? Its objectives are to protect the breeding and exhibiting of dogs as a non-commercial venture and to engage in educational and legislative activities to promote the welfare of dogs. Dues are:

- Businesses $100

For further information contact the ADOA office.

BREEDING BAN PASSES IN CALIFORNIA

In the midst of much controversy, California's San Mateo County Board of Supervisors voted to accept an amended version of an anti-breeding ordinance.

"I think we made history tonight," Supervisor Tom Nolan said after the law passed, 4-1, in mid-December, 1990. Nolan, who introduced the legislation and who recently amended it to include a provision for breeder's licensing program, is optimistic that such ordinances will catch on nationwide.

"Hopefully we've set a precedent for the rest of the nation to follow in combating the pet overpopulation tragedy," he says.

A six-month moratorium on breeding began in July, 1991, during which time a task force plans to develop a breeding licensing program; generated funds will go toward pet overpopulation education. As early as January, 1992, professional and hobbyist breeders will be eligible for breeding permits. Mandatory sterilization will go into effect for all other dogs and cats. The price for noncompliance? $500.
Boomerang, bred and co-owned by Linda Kendall Smith, has done well since he came to Finland in March. I am especially pleased with the Challenge Certificates he has won under breeder-judges, including Keke Kahn, who awarded him the dog C.C. and the European Youth Winner '91 title at the European Winners Show with the following critique:

Meanwhile, my home-bred Audace's Charles Ryder out of Finnish Ch Orlane's Blanche (Int Ch Saxonsprings Alamo - Orlane's Outrageous) and by Ch Orlane's Impudent of Windwick was shown only twice in 1991. Nevertheless, he had C.C., BOB and a group placement by 12 months of age. Three half-sisters from a litter out of another Alamo daughter, sired by the globetrotting Impudent during his brief visit to Helsinki in 1990, have C.C.s each from puppy classes.

Special thanks to Dorothy Kendall and Linda Kendall Smith for their generosity and their friendship, and best wishes for the Lhasa fancy for 1992. See you all in Houston!

Krocket set a record here at San Sei that will be hard to beat! She finished her Companion Dog (CD) Title in three out of three shows in four days time! She joins her grandmother, mother and half brother in the Obedience Crew at San Sei.

Krocket recommends Science Diet for all Educated Women.
When Ming recovered, we discontinued our class lessons and took over his training ourselves for the last six months. Glenn and I took the jumps to different locations and went through the entire Open A routine once a week. Other days we would practice in our yard, driveway, and heel-off-leash up and down our street. The neighborhood children loved to volunteer to be distractions. Our friend, Wayne Moire, and his Chessie Sparty, C.D.X. also practiced with us on a regular basis.

When Ming did not qualify in a few shows because of lagging or the drop, we had our friend and animal behaviorist, Brian Belanger, watch Ming work. Brian said I had two problems. #1 Ming was totally bored; and #2 Ming had me trained. I was allowing him to be sloppy. I had to show Ming I was the boss and he did not like it. However, the advice worked.

I also asked advice from Jean Forester, a GAZETTE columnist I admire, and she said to NEVER practice the recall! Drop Ming wherever and whenever he least expects it and to use my “play” tone. The last two months before Ming earned his C.D.X. title I did this. Glenn was so sick of my high-pitched “play tone” he complained. However, it did work.

Ming earned his second leg on August 17th in Auburn, Mass. plus a Blue ribbon for 1st place. He was the ONLY dog to qualify in OPEN A.

In Ming’s last three shows when he qualified and placed - I used the “play” tone on ALL exercises, with the exception of the long sit and down. The higher “play” pitch of my voice DEFINITELY got his attention.

The last two shows we entered were in Topsham, Maine at the fairgrounds. The three obedience rings were in a cattle barn with a dirt floor. Ming had never worked on dirt before. I warmed Ming up a bit; on the dirt before we went into the ring. Fortunately it was also a cool weekend. Ming performed his best that weekend, and dropped like a shot on the drop on recall! Ming placed third both days out of 19 dogs and earned his C.D.X.

In the four shows Ming qualified in there were 388 obedience entries at ALL levels of obedience. Ming was the only Lhasa Apso!

Ming enjoyed the shows and he enjoyed showing off. I would love to continue to show him in Open B, but I made him a promise - if he earned his C.D.X. he could just have fun the rest of his life, and continue his Therapy visits, with his brother Pong. We were lucky to get through his C.D.X. without a further injury.

Nutritional Strategies for Puppies

- Moisten dry food to make it more palatable and easier to chew until puppies grow permanent teeth—usually by the time they are four months old.

- For growing and playing, puppies need more food than adult dogs but their small stomachs can’t accommodate that amount in one feeding. From the age of six weeks to 10 months, feed three times daily.

- Dry food helps clean dogs’ teeth as they eat, which may result in fewer dental problems throughout their lifetimes.

- Continue feeding specially developed puppy foods until age 1 or 2, depending on the breed.

CHARACTER - GAY AND ASSERTIVE, BUT CHARY OF STRANGERS.

Originating in the lonely and isolated reaches of the Himalayan Mountains the Lhasa Apso reflects his Tibetan heritage in many characteristic ways. Relatively unchanged for hundreds of years, these sturdy little mountain dogs are fastidious by nature and are guardians especially within their domain.

The Lhasa Apso exhibits a regal attitude when looking his best: seldom a pet but rather a companion: often a clown, but never a fool. Historically in Tibet, his primary function was that of a guardian inside the palace, where his intelligence, acute hearing and natural instinct for being able to identify friend from stranger made him well suited for this role.

The Lhasa Apso temperament is unique. His rather independent and stubborn nature requires patient understanding, and he resists harsh or strict discipline. He is rather calm and deliberate, although chary (suspicious) of strangers, a direct reflection of his long-standing heritage of seclusion in Tibet.

Extremely devoted to family, the Lhasa Apso does not change loyalties easily and is less protective away from his home environment. Slow to mature, he does not reach his prime until well into his third or fourth year. He ages gracefully and keeps a youthful appearance and attitude well into his teens.

SIZE - VARIABLE, BUT ABOUT 10 OR 11 INCHES AT SHOULDER FOR DOGS, BITCHES SLIGHTLY SMALLER.

The height of the Lhasa Apso is variable. The use of the word "about" allows variation, ideally between 10 and 11 inches. "Bitches slightly smaller" refers more to those feminine characteristics which distinguish bitches easily from males rather than simply to height.

The standard’s request for a Lhasa Apso of 10 or 11 inches at shoulders dictates a dog whose bone is in proportion to his height and weight. Reflecting his heritage and origin as a breed accustomed to the mountainous and rugged terrain of Tibet, he is agile and capable of maneuvering; there should be no hint of massive bone or body.

The Lhasa Apso is a dog of moderate. Not only is height a factor in the breed, but consideration must also be given to weight, proportion and length of body, for these all contribute to the final picture of overall balance. A Lhasa Apso in proper weight and condition will be of a good, firm flesh, well muscled and neither too fat nor too thin, although a tendency to leanness is not uncommon in the young Lhasa Apso, slow to mature.

COLOR - ALL COLORS EQUALLY ACCEPTABLE WITH OR WITHOUT DARK TIPS TO EARS AND BEARD.

All colors equally acceptable, with or without dark tips to ears and beard.

BODY SHAPE - THE LENGTH FROM POINT OF SHOULDERS TO POINT OF BUTTOCKS LONGER THAN HEIGHT.
length must be adequate for the purpose of protection notwithstanding ease of maintenance, yet give the appearance of luxurious beauty in the show ring. The good headfall and well feathered feet and legs requested in our standard protected this small dog against extreme temperatures and rough terrain of his native land. Because of their late-blooming maturity, the Lhasa Apso may be two or three years of age before the adult coat reaches the ground. Excessive trimming, and/or sculpturing is to be discouraged.

MOUTH AND MUZZLE - THE PREFERRED BITE IS EITHER LEVEL OR SLIGHTLY UNDERSHOT. MUZZLE OF MEDIUM LENGTH; A SQUARE MUZZLE IS OBJECTIONABLE. The muzzle is of medium length, bearing in mind the desired one to two ratio (1:2) of muzzle to skull. The muzzle is neither turned up, nor down-faced; in other words, the planes are parallel when viewed in profile. The top of the muzzle is on a line with or slightly below the bottom of the eye: it should be blunt but never square. The underjaw should be strong and visible from a frontal view, without any indication of snipiness; accordingly, the shape of the muzzle and prominence of lower jaw contribute to the proper expression.

The preferred bite is either level or slightly undershot. A scissors bite, while not desirable, is not a serious fault. An undershot bite with canines visible when the mouth is closed is not desirable. Adequate width of the lower jaw, with a full complement of incisors, contributes to proper expression.

HEAD - HEAVY HEAD FURNISHINGS WITH GOOD FALL OVER EYES, GOOD WHISKERS AND BEARD, SKULL NARROW - FALLING AWAY BEHIND EYES IN A MARKED DEGREE, NOT QUITE FLAT, BUT NOT DOMED OR APPLE SHAPED; STRAIGHT FOREFACE OF FAIR LENGTH. NOSE BLACK, THE LENGTH FROM TIP OF NOSE TO EYE TO BE ROUGHLY ABOUT ONE-THIRD OF THE TOTAL LENGTH FROM NOSE TO BACK OF SKULL.

The Lhasa Apso head must be regarded as very important. The distinct expression of the Lhasa Apso is enhanced by the standard's request for heavy head furnishings which includes muzzle furnishings and beard, it's length and density in proportion to the head fall. The long headfall over the eyes is commonly brushed to the sides when being shown, enabling the dog to see better. Artificial means, such as bands and/or barrettes, to hold back the hair should never be used in the conformation ring.

The skull shape is narrow and although not quite flat, it should not be domed or apple-shaped. Well placed ears, at eye level, will accentuate the narrow head. An earset that is higher than eye level can mislead one into assuming the skull is broad.

To understand the term "falling away behind the eyes" correctly, one must be able to see the width of skull without the illusion created by heavy head furnishings. When examining the head, gently push the hair towards the back of the skull and feel the zygomatic arch (cheek bone), which is slightly curved but not prominent. At the point where the malar bone extends back from the muzzle the zygomatic arch should show a minimal curvature or a very slight arc.

The forehead of the Lhasa Apso is straight. This means not roman nosed or dish faced. The length from the outer tip of the nose to eye is roughly one third the total length from the tip of nose to back of skull or occiput and can be expressed as a one to two ratio (1:2). The muzzle meets the backskull at a moderate angle, forming a shallow stop when viewed in profile.

The standard's request for "nose black" eliminates any possibility of self color liver pigment being correct. Full depth of pigmentation is extremely important in the Lhasa Apso. Dark pigment on eye rims, lips and nose are essential for good expression.

EYES - DARK BROWN, NEITHER VERY LARGE AND FULL NOR VERY SMALL AND SUNK.

The darkness of the eye and it's medium size help give the Lhasa Apso the desired softness of expression. The eye should be somewhat frontally placed, oval, in shape, and should not be prominent. The iris should fill the eye with "minimal white showing.

EARS - PENDANT, HEAVILY FEATHERED.

The ears of the Lhasa Apso are pendant, hanging close to the head, and are heavily feathered. Ears that are placed well back on the skull and ideally set near eye level, will compliment the standard's request for a narrow skull.

LEGS - FORELEGS STRAIGHT, BOTH FORELEGS AND HIND LEGS HEAVILY FURNISHED WITH HAIR.

There should be no discussion of the front legs without mention of the shoulder assembly. The lengths from point of shoulder to elbow and point of shoulder to withers are equal. Proper shoulder placement is essential for support and balance, with smooth transition from neck to backline, and prominent prosternum. From elbow to pastern the leg should appear straight when viewed from the front. The feet may however, turn out slightly, when viewed from the side, the pasterns are slightly let down. The rear construction of the Lhasa Apso is that of normal canine structure, with adequate angulation and placement, hocks perpendicular to the around and slightly behind the buttocks. The front and rear angulation should be in balance, providing well matched reach and drive.

FEET - WELL FEATHERED, SHOULD BE ROUND AND CATLIKE, WITH GOOD PADS.

The feet are well rounded with thick pads. They are heavily furnished with hair between the toes. The hair may be trimmed for neatness. Dew claws may be removed.

TAIL AND CARRIAGE - WELL FEATHERED, SHOULD BE CARRIED WELL OVER BACK IN A SCREW; THERE MAY BE A KINK AT THE END. A LOW CARRIAGE OF STERN IS A SERIOUS FAULT.

The Lhasa Apso has a tail set high enough to enable the tail to be carried well over the back. Carriage of tail may be dependent on attitude as well as structure. In the standard, reference is made to "a low carriage of stern is a serious fault". This means the tail should be up and carried well over the back under normal circumstances. When moving, a Lhasa Apso should carry the tail well over the back, indicating that the tail can be carried high, but may drop the tail when standing or otherwise bored; the tail should, however, immediately flip up over the back as soon as the Lhasa Apso moves. It should be noted that the tail is not always carried in a screw but is often carried well over the back in a curl lying to the side. A kink is not uncommon in the Lhasa Apso's tail. The tail should be well feathered with long hair.

Parasitic infections occur commonly in both dogs and cats. Of all the internal parasites that affect our pets, whipworms are probably the most difficult to diagnose. An unusual life cycle and a low index of suspicion by veterinarians add to the difficulty in diagnosing the problem. This article will discuss whipworms and why they should concern practitioners.

Whipworms (Trichuris vulpis) are blood-suckers and inhabit the cecum or colon. Occasionally diagnosed during a routine fecal exam on an asymptomatic animal, they are also a common cause of chronic diarrhea in the dog. They are often not found during a fecal exam on a symptomatic animal.

Life Cycle

One of the most common reasons for treatment failure when treating whip worms is a misunderstanding of the life cycle. With roundworms and hookworms, the initial treatment is followed by a second treatment in three weeks (the prepatent period of these two parasites). Treat whipworms that way, and you're guaranteed to fail. That's because the prepatent period "time from ingestion of an infective egg until the egg matures into an adult egg-producing worm) is three months for whipworms. This means that the final deworming must occur three months after the initial treatment. Many veterinarians aren't aware of this and only do a second deworming three weeks after the first treatment.

Current recommendations include an initial deworming followed by a second in three weeks and the final treatment three months after the first treatment. Keep the prepatent period in mind and you'll have more treatment successes.

Diagnosis

Diagnosis of trichuriasis is difficult for several reasons:

- Female whipworms are not very prolific and only produce a few eggs intermittently; therefore, the chance of finding ova on one fecal exam is almost nonexistent. Several fecal exams should be done.
- The disease often is not suspected as a cause of chronic diarrhea.
- The entire slide should be scanned when performing a fecal exam as often only one egg will be present.
- Both a direct smear and flotation should be performed.
- Whipworm eggs, while heavier than other parasitic ova, will float in the standard sodium nitrate solution. However, a zinc sulfate solution with its higher specific gravity can also be used. Saturated sugar solutions described in textbooks are also acceptable, although some feel that this solution distorts the ova more than other solutions.

BIS CH Kar-Lee Golden Star Sprinkle is expecting a litter in Dec out of BIS Ch Rufkins Katas Front Page News.
Whipworms commonly cause large bowel diarrhea in dogs. Often this diarrhea contains mucus and/or bright red blood (hematochezia). These findings are not specific to whipworms, however, I have also seen whipworms cause mild abdominal pain (colic) as the sole symptom. Many cases of whipworms are asymptomatic; many cases of chronic diarrhea are due to occult trichuriasis. In addition to diagnosing the disease by finding ova on a fecal exam, the disease can also be diagnosed by response to treatment when the diseases suspected and by finding the worms on colonoscopy. It is my experience that I usually find the ova in asymptomatic dogs and don’t find the ova (occult infection) in dogs with diarrhea.

These is no chance for transmission to man, although there have been rare reports of finding the ova in asymptomatic people and of one case where the worms were discovered in a person’s appendix.

Treatment

Treatment is accomplished through three dewormings, the second one three weeks after the initial one and the third three months after the initial one. In cases of occult infection, a positive response to the first deworming is diagnostic. As a matter of fact, I feel that all dogs with chronic diarrhea should be dewormed for whipworms early in the course of the disease and prior to performing more expensive and more invasive diagnostic tests.

Diagnosing trichuriasis is a difficult task. Several aspects of whipworm’s life cycle make this a challenge. Also, it is easily missed by many practitioners who don’t suspect this tiny worm as the cause of a dog’s diarrhea. By being alert for this disease and keeping the life cycle in mind, diagnosis and treatment of canine trichuriasis should become easier.

* Two different species of Trichuris have been rarely reported in cats.

We will be taping the 1992 Lhassa Apso Club of Greater New York specialty held on February 9th. This is LACOGNY's second independent specialty. After last year's highly successful show, we anticipate an entry in excess of 100 Lhassas from all over the United States. With this year's Westminster KC show a specials only, we will attract most of those entries as well as all the class dogs that are coming out for the 1992 season.

With an outstanding Judge in Mrs. Margaret Young Rennian we have been told that many exhibitors are anxious to show their Lhassas under her.

Rounding out our Judges will be Sarah Lawrence doing the Sweepstakes. Sweepstakes are always popular, and bring forth so many new young Lhassas who are always fun to watch in the ring. With a large entry expected we are pleased to announce that we will be able to keep the cost of the Specialty tape down due to the new copy equipment we acquired after the ALAC Specialty. We can now put 4 hours of a show on a single tape.

So we can tape all the regular classes and copy them on one tape. Sweepstakes will still be a separate tape. The regular class tape will be $30.00 plus $2.90 postage and $20.00 plus $2.90 postage for the Sweepstakes tape.

Save the cost of postage by ordering your tape before February 9th. We will pick up the postage cost for any advance orders. ALSO THIS YEAR WILL BE ACCEPTING, MASTER-CHARGE....VISA ....or AMERICAN EXPRESS credit cards.

1990 tapes for the LACOGNY Specialty, ALAC Specialty, Westchester and Somerset Hills Specialties are still available at $25.00 plus postage for each tape.
