BIS, BISS ENG CH, & BISS AM CH REMARC REBELLION AT NICHANN

The #1 Lhasa from Great Britain, CRUFTS & National Specialty Best of Breed

(Ch Car-Ru's Just Glance My Way X Ch Tatti Su's Tiger Lily)

'Sami' is shown with his former handler, S. Marie Cooney, who so expertly guided him to BISS at Merrimack and Multiple Group Wins. He is now in the hands of the incomparable Bill Trainor.

I shall always be indebted to "Mickey", not only for her presentation of "Sami", but also for the loving care and superb conditioning she gave him. I wish her all the best in her future ventures.

I am delighted that Bill has taken "Sami" under his wing and look forward with great anticipation to this special partnership in the ring.

"Sunshine" shown going Winners for her first 2 points, judge Dolly Ward. Sunshine was handled by Wally Rice, Aussie "great" husband of Carol Smith Rice. The following week, Carol took her in under Mrs Lynwood Walton for another two points. This cute girl was winner of Lhasa Apso Club of Southern California B Match, breeder/judge Barbara Peterson, and then went Best In Sweeps at the Specialty of Lhasa Apso Club of Southern California in June, breeder/judge Gloria Fowler. POPPY started out with WB, BOW, BOS under Charles Mulock, handled by Michelle Miller. She continued with points under Dorothy Welsh, Arlene Czech, Cyril Bernfeld, and a major under LaMar Mathis. Her friend Connie Smith then took over in Tampa and Poppy won back-to-back majors under Denny Kodner (shown) and Fred Braun.

POPPY is small - just 9 1/2 inches at the withers, very compact, has a really sweet face and can move . . .

Many thanks to Michelle and Connie for their good work and TLC.

BENJI is shown going Group 2 under Dolly Ward on the way to his Championship. Benji is Phantom’s first kid and was shown exclusively by Carol Smith Rice. He is RED and correct size with beautiful teeth, correct dentition. He is exceptionally loving, and is proven.

BENJI received points from Florence Savage, Dr Reinitz, Vera bistrim, Herb Rosen (BOB), Dolly Ward (BOB, Group 2), Susan Dale, Lewis Bayne (BOB), John Honig (BOB), Derek Rayne and finished with a major at the Lhasa Apso Club of Southern California Specialty, under Russell Herman. Thanks to all the judges for finishing this young man at 17 months of age.

Breeders: Gale Chase & Lynn Lowy
Here's our Phantom/Spiffy boy, Joey, shown going Group I under Jack Potts. Joey is our young phenomenon - he finished in three weekends - UNDEFEATED! - with two BOB's from the classes and a group placement, on April 26, 1992. He had steady BOB's and Group placements through June. He now has two Group I's and a total of 19 BOB's and 12 Group placements. Quite a record for a young man of just 18 months.

Joey is 10 3/4 inches, very slightly undershot bite with full dentition, a straight front, good angulation and can really move. He is a sweet and loving boy.

Dear ALAC Member:

On Saturday, September 26, 1992, a Board Meeting was held in Chicago at the Hilton Hotel, located at O'Hare Airport. It was a convenient location in walking distance from all terminals. The meeting started shortly after noon and lasted about 13 hours, with only one break for supper. I personally feel that it was congenial, productive and well prepared for. All Officers and AKC Delegates were in attendance and only two Board members and our past President were absent. I want to thank all the members who attended and gave up their weekend in order to participate on behalf of ALAC.

I'll attempt to update you on some of the material covered. It will all be in the minutes that will be mailed once approved and also published in the Bulletin, but that could be a couple of months away.

All committee chairs were reappointed with the following exceptions: Advertising will now be handled by Pat Keen. Logo will be headed by Pat Hufnail and the Education and Health Committees have been consolidated and will be chaired by Lynn Jamison.

The National Specialty Committee was appointed as follows:

We anticipate that 1994 will be the first year that ALAC officially “runs” the National. It is scheduled to take place in San Francisco and will be held during the third week of June. Under our new system there are six regions and the National will rotate from region to region. It is quite possible that regions will consolidate and utilize a common site for Specialties. In 1994 and thereafter the six Futurities will be held during April and May. This will also include the region of the National. At the National there will be a competition for all puppy and adult winners from the six regions for the honor of winning the Grand Futurity Award. There will be only one Grand Futurity winner each year and it will be selected at the National.

If any member has any questions, ideas or comments please feel free to give me a call or write a letter. Wishing all members and Lhasas a wonderful holiday season.

ANNOUNCING ALAC'S ADOPTION OF THE MEASUREMENT CERTIFICATION PROGRAM
A Proposal Authored and Submitted by Nancy Plunkett

The following proposal has been accepted by ALAC and is outlined here for your information. This program will provide breeders, owners, and exhibitors with measurements of their dogs which would not only be uniformly accurate, but verifiable as well. What a progressive step this will be for us as we strive to preserve the Lhasa Apso breed!

Anyone who has been involved with Lhasa Apso for even a short time is aware that size has become a major concern in our breed. Without a height disqualification in our breed standard or a set basis for comparison between dogs of different size and proportion, it has become nearly impossible for anyone to correctly evaluate the size of any dog. Most of us will occasionally see a dog in the ring whose measurements we are familiar with, allowing us to gauge the approximate size of the immediately surrounding dogs. But more often we are presented with dogs whose measurements are totally unknown to us, and situations like these, often give rise to the most confusion and concern among the Lhasa Fancy. Everyone's "eye" tends to see a little bit differently. Coat, proportion, and bone can all offer an illusion of a dog's size and can be perceived in a different way by each person watching. A dog that one person might see as being too large, another might view as just right - or even too small. They cannot all be right, yet currently we have no way of accurately establishing what that particular dog's measurements might actually be.

To complicate the issue even further, everyone is measuring their dogs with different measuring tools, some which are less that accurate; while others don't measure at all, assuming that their dogs are all right because "they look about the same as everyone else's". Still, there are some who, unfortunately, are not measuring their dogs correctly, perhaps measuring their height from the back rather than from the wither, or measuring the length from the prosternum rather than from the point of shoulder. We still others have who simply make "guestimates" of their dog's measurements, hoping that they are exactly right each time. All of these measurements are presented equally as "true" and there is no way of determining absolutely which of them are accurate and which are not. Sadly, as a result of all these different methods of measuring, they ALL tend to become a little suspect when quoted to the average person without a wicket in hand. Personally, I have experienced situations where people seemed to question the measurements I stated on a specific dog, and given the circumstances, they cannot be blamed for being doubtful. This is the main reason that I have taken to carrying a wicket in my tack box in the last few years; it enables me to verify the measurements I give on my dogs so that there can be no question as to their accuracy. However, even this method has its limitations in that measurements are not always discussed at times when both dog and wicket are available.

GUIDELINES

The Measurement Certification Program (MCP) is a program designed specifically for the Lhasa Apso breeder/exhibitor as a means for providing a much more uniform system of measurement for our dogs than is presently available. A MCP clinic will be held on a trial basis in conjunction with our 1993 National Specialty and hopefully at subsequent National Specialties, giving ALAC members, nationwide, an opportunity to have their dog's height, length, and weight officially measured and certified through the program. Measurements of each dog would be taken by three different persons in order to insure absolutely accuracy, with measurements recorded by a fourth person. Each measurer will not know the other measurements taken of the dog. Each dog participating in the program would be issued a Certification of Measurement, which the breeder/owner could utilize in a number of ways.

Anyone who owns a registered Lhasa Apso will be eligible to participate. As in other certification programs, dogs MUST be at least two (2) years old in order to participate. A committee of five (5), chaired by Nancy Plunkett, is being formed, three of the committee members will act as "measurers" and two will be "recorders." The main reason for having three different people measuring each dog is so the committee can be sure that the certified measurements will be correct. Obviously, there will have to be some sort of training or certification of the measurers themselves in order to be certain that each is measuring the same way. In case of a notable discrepancy among any one set of measurements, that dog would be re-measured in order to determine the correct set of figures.

POTENTIAL BENEFITS

Some of the potential benefits of the MCP are:
1. to provide uniformity of measurements for all participating Lhasa Apso owners and their dogs.
2. to provide a permanent historical record of Lhasa Apso measurements for future generations of Lhasa Apso breeders.
3. to provide an accurate and verifiable record of measurements for each Lhasa Apso certified by the program.
4. As a breeders aid, the program offers more accurate and detailed information for kennel records and pedigrees, provide an advertising tool for the yearbook and other breed publications, and serve as an excellent reference source when planning future breedings.
5. Benefits to ALAC include increased attendance/entries at National Specialties, and possible Regional Specialties, Futurities; increased membership in ALAC; and added stature and respect for ALAC as a parent club, the result of its effort to increase awareness of - and educate people - this very important aspect of the Lhasa Apso.

ADDITIONAL INFORMATION

PARTICIPATION IN THIS PROGRAM WILL BE ON A STRICTLY VOLUNTARY BASIS! By educating people about the importance of measuring their dogs correctly, any size problem that today's Lhasa Apso breeders are facing continued on page 20 will eventually correct itself — making a size disqualification in our breed standard unnecessary! Dogs WILL NOT have to “measure in” to any particular size range in order to be certified. The MCP was designed to tell us WHAT our dog’s measurements actually are, NOT what anyone thinks they should be! Until we provide some type of uniform system of measurement for our dogs, the only way of verifying the measurements given on any dog will be to perform a hands-on examination, which is impractical and often impossible.

Is there any way to verify the identity of the dogs being measured? It’s unfortunate that this question need even be asked, but it is a valid one. When I first designed the MCP, this was the one problem I could not easily resolve; I eventually came to the conclusion that the small risk of having “ringers” used was impractical and often impossible.

Dear ALAC Members and Specialty Clubs:

It is time once again to send out a request for futurity sites. We hope that you will discuss the possibilities and consider submitting a bid.

Region I will be held in conjunction with the National Specialty but we need locations in regions II, III and IV. Futurities are to be held during the month of July or August. It is necessary to keep the age groups and cut off dates consistent year to year. We need your support without it we would not have places to hold futurities. Your support and responses in the past and hopefully in the future are greatly appreciated. To avoid any confusion or lack of pertinent information please fill out the form enclosed when applying. Please send your bids for the 1993 Futurities to:

Deadline: Nov 15th, 1992

Thank you,
Debbie Burke, Chair

Hurricane Andrew hit south of Miami and all but wiped out the home of Michael Santora and Alan Loso. There was also damage to Betty Chidley's home, but fortunately not severe. The ALAC Board sent a check to Michael and Alan to help out with some of the expenses incurred trying to ship some of the dogs to locations to stay while they try to pull things back together. We received a very nice letter of thank you and gratitude. It has been about 7 weeks since the hurricane and they have just gotten electricity. An awful thing to think about with temperatures and humidity in the 90's. They were able to rig up a generator to an air conditioner to try to keep the dogs a little cooler.

One of the oldest dogs died during the storm of a heart attack and they lost two later contributed to stress.

The Dorothy Benetiz Fund was originally set up to help people at just these kind of times. If you wish to make a contribution to be directed to Hurricane Andrew relief please mail it to Carolyn Herbel, treasurer and make it for this purpose.

The Star Producers System was developed through the research we did while writing our book, THE COMPLETE LHASA APSO, in order to rate the producing ability of sires and dams in our breed. The Star Producers System was published in March, 1981 in the breed magazine LHASA TALES.

The Star Producers System includes all producers with the qualifying number of champion offspring. It is not intended to compete with the ROM (Register of Merit) System of the American Lhasa Apso Club, Inc., but to make additional information known about those dogs and bitches who are not entitled to include ROM after their names. Some reasons for a Lhasa Apso not being entitled to have an ROM added to his name may be that the owner is not a member of ALAC, or is a member but has not applied for the title, or the owner of the qualified Lhasa was retired or deceased before the ROM system was established in 1973.

We are very proud of our first homebred champion, Allie, shown going Best of Breed over five specials for a five point major, to finish his championship all breeder/owner/handled. Whisper, his mother, went Best of Opposite Sex on the same day for a five point major. Thanks to Thomas Conway for appreciating our two dogs and making this a great day for us. Allie got all of his points, but the last major, from the Bred by Exhibitor Class, which included another BOB over a special. We would like to thank Janie Sheridan for letting us have Whisper and being our one woman cheering section through it all. And to Esther DeFaicisk, a special thanks for all her help and hospitality.

It was one of those special days for us at the dog show. Our beautiful Whis is just one major away from her Championship.

LOCAL CLUB NEWS

To: Local Clubs, Local Club Designees, & ALAC members

We need your help to keep an honored tradition of "our" club! The Lhasa fancy is dependent on our local clubs to host the futurities in each region every year.

Hosting a futurity is a wonderful opportunity to unite breeders nationwide or at least within your region. A futurity can give a new club or small group an opportunity of a show activity before they become sanctioned by AKC, can enhance an established clubs special weekend. Or create another pleasant fun show or weekend for all.

ALAC is going through some changes with specialties and futurities but for now the 1993 remains the same as it has been for years. We need host club for 1993. Please consider your clubs availability and willingness to help and serve our national club and fancy.

Hosting a futurity need not be a burden. It is an ALAC supported event your club would be hosting. Helping with the local kennel club coordination and informing the judge of local information. Can be with any All-Breed show just as a futurity held at an all breed. Established clubs may additionally support the entry, consider it or hold with their specialty.

Remember you need not be members of ALAC to host or participate in a futurity. Anyone can host a futurity (established club, up & coming club or enthusiastic supporters). Also anyone (ALAC member or not) can nominate a litter. Don't forget they must be nominated within 90 days of birth.

Not long ago, at a show, I noticed a passerby intently studying the bitch I was getting ready to go into the ring. As she tentatively approached closer, she matter of factly stated “I see you have an old fashioned Lhasa.” Although I’d heard the term on occasion before, it momentarily took me aback. No, I slowly commented, not an old fashioned Lhasa, just a Lhasa.

The more I thought about it, the more perplexed I became. When time came for her to go into the ring, I stood back and viewed her as her handler placed her into a stack. Her dark mahogany color with white shawl made her stand out in the large class of predominantly pale gold bitches. She certainly did look different, but it was more than her color. Her hard straight coast, though long, dense and shiny didn’t look as full as the plush blonde fluff of her peers. As they moved around the ring, I noted her gait though much slower than that of the other dogs (she never was one you would call a fireball) seemed to cover more ground and was effortless. She won that day, only this time I went home wondering why.

At home that evening, I pulled out all my Lhasa books and began pouring over them. I looked at all the old dogs - yes, she did resemble them. I reread the standard from these books and mentally compared her to it. True, she had her faults, but faults and all she fit or at least closely resembled that standard. I picked up a book published more recently and repeated the process. The standard was identical and so were my conclusions. The type on the dogs, though slightly varied, left no indication that they, or she for that matter, were anything but Lhasas.

I then switched from the books to the latest publications and it was here that I noticed a tangible difference. As I sorted through the stacks of Bulletins, Reporters, Unlimiteds and other dog publications I’d managed to squirrel away over the years, I could detect a noticeable change in the appearance of the dogs. Some subtle, some not. Although the majority of variables leaned towards type and size, it was a comprehensible variable. True there were some dogs that resembled Shi Tzu or T.T.’s, but considering our standard with its “should be’s” and “abouts”, it’s understandable.

There were some that looked more like a caricature of a Lhasa than a Lhasa and this bothered me. Now I don’t propose we run amok and throw out the baby with the bath water. Many of us, myself included, have finished and or bred dogs who though did not measure up to our personal ideals had goods that far outweighed the bads. And though we all strive to produce perfection, as far as I can tell, none of us have yet to achieve it. What I am saying is that we must draw the line at the structural changes that have been occurring in the Lhasa. Short backs, straight shoulders with over angulated rears to compensate, the exaggerated rear kick and so on - contradictions to the standard rather than slight variations.

After all this obsession with the “old fashioned Lhasa”, I still haven’t figured out what an old fashioned or a new fashioned Lhasa is. I’ll tell you one thing though, in my opinion, if a new fashioned Lhasa is merely a sounder typer, showier version of those great old dogs of the past, then I plan to be quite content with my “old fashioned Lhasa”... WHAT'S YOUR OPINION???

AGING PETS NEED SPECIAL CARE

Diet, exercise and medical advances not only benefit us, they add years and enhance the quality of our pets’ lives, too.

As pets grow older, physical changes start occurring such as weight gain or loss, thinning and graying coats, bad breath, behavioral changes, arthritis, hearing and vision loss, and inappropriate urination.

Problems that aren’t noticeable can be fatal if left untreated. Cancer is the number one, nonaccidental cause of death in dogs and cats. Other common ailments in older pets include kidney disease, obesity, dental problems, and heart disease.

A preventive health-care program is the key to keeping pets healthier longer.

"Pets enter the 'golden' years sooner than you may think," said Dr. Tom Maddux, president of the American Animal Hospital Association. "For dogs, old age can begin as early as seven years, and for cats about nine.

"By the time a pet is 10 or 11, there is a strong bond between the pet and the owner," Dr. Maddux said, "It's usually at this time when the owner starts wondering how long the pet will live. A preventive health-care program and regular checkups can add years to the life of a pet."

Health-care advice your veterinarian will give for your aging pet is similar to programs for humans—weight control, exercise, dental care, regular examinations and tests for early disease detection. Your veterinarian has a program that also includes reproductive planning, behavioral and environmental counseling, internal and external parasite control, and nutritional guidance. These programs let the veterinarian identify and modify any risks to your pet's health.

Annual checkups help identify health problems in the early stages. Your veterinarian will conduct a standard physical exam in which your pet's eyes, ears, nose, heart and lungs, reproductive system, abdomen, and skill will be checked. A complete dental exam will determine your pet’s oral health. Laboratory work such as a complete blood count and urinalysis may be performed, if necessary.

"Medical advances help pet live longer, but proper home care and lifestyle also are important to the quality and length of a pet's life,” Dr. Maddux said. Lifestyle can put pets at risk for developing certain health problems, such as obesity. Excessive quantities

WHEN PETS START TO AGE

The aging process varies with breed and lifestyle.

- Small dogs (less than 20 pounds) by 11 years old
- Medium dogs (21-50 pounds) by 10 years old
- Large dogs (51-90 pounds) by 9 years old
- Giant dogs (over 90 pounds) by 7 years old
- Cats (most breeds) by 8 to 10 years old

...of pet food, human food and other treats contribute to obesity in less-active pets.

Older pets should be fed a diet with fewer calories to prevent obesity and the related risks. Special diets are recommended for underweight pets and pets with age-related diseases.

In addition to a proper diet, regular dental cleaning is especially important as the pet ages. Tooth loss and gum disease are more common as pets get older. Regular cleaning and polishing treatments as well as home dental care help deep a pet's teeth strong and healthy.

Many older pets require moderate, consistent exercise as opposed to sporadic and strenuous walks or runs. Regular exercise is important to maintain bone strength, muscle tone, and stamina.

Grooming and bathing patterns also change with age of the pet. Owners may need to bathe their pets more frequently and use special shampoos. The frequency of bathing also will depend on the climate, the pet's health status, and the breed.

While many problems in older pets cannot be avoided as they are part of the normal aging process, owners who practice preventive health care and provide a sensible diet and exercise routine give their pets the best chance to live a longer, healthier life.

The Boys beg for Science Diet
After years of exhibiting, breeding, observing and studying, you come up with the long-expected dog, the one you feel will be the big winner! The dog finished easily and is making a name for itself in the Group ring, where the dog and its professional handler are becoming known as a "team." Still, the Best In Show rosette remains elusive. Is it time to change handlers?

For many exhibitors with the wherewithal to campaign a dog at this level, the handler becomes the most important person in their lives (along with the dog show judges, of course). The relationship between handler and owner can be compared to a spousal union. Fortunately, handler-client "marriages" are easier to dissolve, despite the emotional commitment that goes into them.

The separation can work both ways: The client can drop the handler, or the handler can be attracted by potentially greener pastures within the same breed.

One exhibitor was abandoned by her long-time handler when the handler was approached by a new client she thought was a better financial position to commit to an extensive campaign in the same breed. This handler walked away from an outstanding specimen, already gaining a reputation, in favor of a lesser dog, similar in type, that she thought might have a better chance of winning.

She was wrong on several counts. The new client couldn't pay the bills. The dog rarely made it out of the breed ring. The apologetic handler soon returned to the original client's dog, but the first judge she showed to didn't give her a second look. The result was a bitter ending to what previously has been a cordial, long-term relationship.

Fortunately, this kind of incident is rare, particularly if an owner gets off on the right foot with what most handlers consider to be the key to a successful client-handler relationship, good communication.

"Honesty and good communication from the onset are essential," says Elliott Weiss, who, with his wife, Ellen, shows winners in most of the seven Groups. "The client should know from day one what to expect. There shouldn't be any surprises. Too many owners are taken advantage of because they just don't know about things like time conflicts."

Mark Threlfall, president of the Professional Handlers' Association (PHA), echoes Weiss' thoughts. "Communication between both parties, mutual trust and the client allowing the handler some leeway in making decisions" are all prerequisites for establishing a good handler-client relationship, says Threlfall, an all-breed professional handler for the past 12 years.

Those words—honesty and trust—crop up frequently when talking to professional handlers about what goes into a good handler-client relationship.

"Everything must be straightforward and clear between the parties," stresses Terry Lazzaro Hundt, who considers herself a specialist in Doberman Pinschers, but handles all breeds.

Who's Working for Whom?

Tim Kiernan, another all-breed handler who focuses on sporting, herding and hound breeds, agrees that honesty is essential, "as in all relationships." In addition, he says, handlers must remember that they work for the client, and clients should remember that they are not a handler's sole...

’Merlin’

(Ch Serenade’s Incantation X Bodnath Drakcha Goldilocks)

Merlin is shown winning Winners Dog, Best of Winners and Best of Opposite Sex under judge Rose Ellen Fetter for his second point. At nine months old, he has 4 points and reserve to a 5 point major under Judge Keke Kahn at the LACOGNY Specialty show at Somerset Hills. Thank you for noticing this flashy puppy!

Congratulations to another Khampa son, Hope-full’s Happy Khamper, and to his breeder/owner/handler, Jeanne Hoe, for winning Best Puppy in Futurity (Region 1) out of the 6-9 month class and Best in Sweepstakes at the LACOGNY Specialty show out of the 9-12 month class.

Merlin makes Science Diet disappear
To Michael Zollo, trust, respect and adequate resources on the part of client and handler are indispensable if a long-term, successful relationship is to be established.

Joy Quallenberg agrees with her colleagues. "Honesty and trust" are the necessary ingredients for a good partnership, says this handler, who adds that she shows all breeds except those for which others are better qualified, such as Poodles and Old English Sheepdogs, which require specialized grooming.

If your handler and dog are winning in the breed ring and placing in the Group, it's probably safe to assume that the handler made a reasonably accurate assessment of your dog.

Handlers have different criteria for accepting or rejecting dogs. Elliott Weiss, first and foremost, would never accept a dog that bites. Then, while he recognized that "no dog is perfect," he looks for "reasonably good breed type" in a client's dog.

Mark Threlfall wants the dogs he shows to be at least "equal in quality to those being shown against it."

Terry Hundt tries to show "quality specimens...I don't show dogs I don't feel good about." Joy Quallenberg insists that her clients' dogs exhibit sufficient breed characteristics "to be competitive...I will not show a dog for dollars. I must be able to think it can win."

Michael Zollo looks for "basic, finishable qualities and good temperament." Nebraska-based Tim Kiernan looks at the quality of the dog, and if he considers it borderline, offers to show it 10 times and then reevaluate its prospects. He also has another important consideration; the client's ability to pay the bill.

The handling bill-like it or not-is a major aspect of showing dogs today. Any exhibitors beginning associations with handlers need to be clear from the start what they are facing financially. Group placements cost, and owners should know exactly what every fee will be before they embark on hiring a handler.

The bill also may include hidden costs such as advertising. While most judges will insist that ads have no influence on them, may Group-and Best in Show-level exhibitors and handlers believe otherwise. The truth may be somewhere in between, but a fact of today's dog show life is that advertising top winners eats up a healthy chunk of an owner's show budget. Owners may blame their handlers for not reaching the Best In Show pinnacle, while handlers, in turn, may blame owners for not spending the big dollars necessary to reach those heights.

This is another area where communication proves essential. Talk things out. Ask your handler what he or she feels needs to be done to bring home the top prize. It may be a matter of sending the dog to a less densely populated area to establish a name, or it may just be a question of waiting until the dog reaches full maturity. Or, as some say, it may just not be your turn yet.

Exhibitors have been known to lose patience or become greedy too quickly. Years ago, a Doberman Pinscher bitch purchased as a pet succeeded in the show ring beyond anyone's expectations. After several Group placements, she achieved a Best in Show win. She and her handler truly were a team. But that first Best served only to whet the owner's appetite, and the dog soon appeared in the ring with a new handler who supposedly had more clout. The team was broken up, the dog lost her desire to perform, and the win steak crashed to an end.

Does your handler know your dog's attributes and faults in relation to the standard necessary to show it to its best advantage? Most handlers make an effort to learn about a new breed before they take it on.

Perhaps your dog is not being groomed properly. If you have a breed that should not be trimmed, make sure your handler abides by your wishes in the critical area. When the Petit Basset Griffon Vendéen joined the Hound Group in February 1990, many exhibitors groaned that the handlers would "ruin the breed" by overgrooming this working field hound. That's the case only if the owners allow it.

Owners pay the bills, and they have the final say. Handlers work for them! While the improperly groomed dog may look attractive, it could be faulted by knowledgeable judges when it reaches the Best In Show ring. There, not only are all seven dogs under the judge's close scrutiny, but the judge is being scrutinized by the ringside gallery and knows that a blatant mistake will be the subject of dog show gossip until something juicier comes along.

Does your handler always get to the Breed, Group and Best In Show rings with your dog, or...

does another client get preference? Ring conflicts have ended many a handler-client relationship. If the handler has two dogs due in the ring at the same time, find out which one gets priority, and who covers the other one.

Preferential Treatment

One exhibitor was asked to show her own dog when the handler felt she had a better chance of winning the points that day with a different dog of the same breed. Fair enough. However, the exhibitor who showed her own dog was then billed for the handling fee, with the explanation that the handler was exercising her right to place the dog with the "most appropriate" alternate handler available. On that day, she insisted, she felt the owner was the "most appropriate." Understandably, the exhibitor refused to pay for handling her own dog, and the handler lost a long-time client.

Most handlers use a seniority system to determine priorities. "The longer I've been showing for a client, the higher the priority," says Zollo. Hundt also gives preference within a given breed to the long-term client. In the Group ring, Threlfall tries to stay on the dog he feels has the best chance of winning. "Clients leave that up to us," he says. If Kiernan has a conflict between class dogs and specials, the later come first. With the Weises, priorities usually are determined by seniority, but "nothing is written in stone and there can be exceptions."

All of these professionals are particular about who substitutes for them if they have a conflict. "The person must be qualified to handle the animal and be able to do an equally good job in my mind," says Quallenberg. Hundt determines qualified substitutes "by their ability and their attitude with the dog." The Weises feel they're in a fortunate position in that both of them are capable of showing all the dogs they handle. In extreme cases, they look for a substitute who is familiar with the particular breed.

Kiernan takes a different approach. If he can't find a handler experienced with the breed who "will not be rough on the dog," he pulls the animal from the class. "Most owners like this; they feel they have hired me, not someone else." If the dog is not shown, there's no fee for the day.

Living with the Handler

Where does your dog spend most of its time? It's living with you and being delivered to the handler at the shows, it may not make the transition to "show dog" as easily as necessary to give a top-notch performance in the ring. Some handlers prefer that the dogs live with them, but aren't strict about it. "The rapport is better between handler and dog, and the grooming and conditioning are better," Kiernan believes, if the dog remains with the handler.

Threlfall wants most new dogs to spend at least two weeks with him before he shows them for the first time, while Hundt only requires those dogs that need training or grooming work be kennel with her. Zollo prefers that the owners take care of their own dogs once the dogs have the show routine down pat. The exception for him and the Weises is when the owners are unable to keep the dogs in good shape for the ring. "Dog shows are won on conditioning," Weiss says, "It's a waste of the owner's money and our time to show a dog that's not in shape."

Whether your dog might be better off moving into the handler's kennel, despite the added cost, is a topic you and your handler must explore thoroughly before making a decision.

Observe your handler's demeanor at the shows. Is he or she a good sport? A handler's behavior reflects on the clients, and judges would be less than human if their opinions weren't colored by an exhibitor's attitude—whether that exhibitor is a novice or a professional. Some handlers may not even be aware of their brusqueness in grabbing a ribbon and rushing off to another ring. Let your handler know you'd appreciate a little more ring courtesy if you feel he is acting inappropriately. Some may even welcome the constructive criticism.

Most handlers agree about what a client should expect from them: "The best possible care of their dogs at the shows and at home," according to Elliott Weiss. "Be up front about the rates," add Threlfall.

Quallenberg feels a client should require a "professional attitude in and out of the ring, top-notch animal care and proper presentation in the ring, assuming the animal is trained and in condition to be competitive."

Tim Kiernan warns exhibitors about to embark on a relationship with a handler, "Don't be stupid.

Handler-Client Relationships

Check him out!"

Handlers do their own share of checking when they're approached by new would-be clients. "I want to know their objectives in this sport," says Zollo of prospective clients. Quallenberg will also discuss clients' goals for their dogs: Do they just want a championship and a few Bests of Breed, or are they looking for Group and Best in Show wins?

"We need a definite idea from owners about their objectives," says Weiss. "There should be an honest appraisal of the dog and its capabilities."

One former handler has his own pet peeve about some owners. "Too often, clients hire a handler just to win, and they themselves aren't concerned about the dog's welfare," he complains. "They should expect good care, not just ribbons and trophies."

Once you've established the relationship, don't expect overnight miracles. It takes time for dog and handler to become a "team" and achieve the success you've dreamed of.

One client who achieved even more than she dreamed of, but managed to keep it in perspective, is Nancy Erny. Her Doberman Pinscher bitch was campaigned by Terry Hundt and retired recently with four Best In Show wins.

Terry is her third handler in her 10-plus years of showing Dobermans. "The relationships all worked," Erny insists. "There's more to dog shows than winning. My friends will last longer than my dog."

She and Hundt work together on the dog's career. "I discuss everything with Terry," she said on the eve of her bitch's retirement. "Openness makes our relationship work. If Terry does something that upsets me, I wait until the right time to tell her."

"I won't get possessed by this. If the dog never wins again, she's been the thrill of a lifetime."

While you're waiting for that thrill, be patient, learn to lose and win graciously, pay your bills on time, don't get underfoot at the shows, and have lots of fun. For, as Tim Kiernan reminds us, "We all do it for the love and fun of purebred dogs. We must keep that in mind."

Bear Brags About His Kids...

Lawrenceville, GA While Bear lounges around the living room, his kids are going on the show road. Art-Est Major League received his first point at the Pensacola show in September. At less than 9 months this boy has accumulated several reserves including one major reserve.

Bear's other show kids are: Bahr-B's Sir Adam Delilah and Bahr-B's Pearl of Wisdom (1-31-92) who are just beginning their show careers. Delilah owns a heard of Bassetts, Sam (a male Lhasa) and a Tiffey at Sharon and Julia Adams. Until we find the right home, Pearl will be "hanging out" at Bahr-B's.

Bear Congratulates...

Chattanooga, TN Bear congratulates Angi's Fabulous Frivolous Fox on her 1st point at the Chattanooga show, owner handled by Angie Adkins. Also Bear's brother Bahr-B's Beary Big A-Nuff for his major reserve under Breeder-Judge Carolyn Herbel.

Blessed Events...

Atlanta, GA We are planning a breeding between Art-Est Jn-E of Kamelot (Bear's mom) and Li-Dra's Fetch Me a Bone (Gremlin). Gremlin, owned by Linda Powell, is out of Ch. Triple Threat Chad and Croton Christmas Angel and needs only three singles to complete his championship. We will also be breeding our elegant little Holli (Ch. Hopeful's Best Holliberry-E) when she comes in season in October.

Bear at Stud...

Atlanta, GA According to the "ole wicket", Bear is 11 1/4" at the shoulder, weights 18 lbs., has a dead level topline, a tight reverse scissor bite with full dentition. Bear is a natural showman with personality plus. He is a proven producer. If you're looking to add personality and balance to your line..Bear is the dog for you. Interested females may contact Bear at (404) 633-8898.

Art-Est Bahr-B's Nite Star...

Asheville, NC "Star" is looking good! She now has 13 points and only needs a major to complete her championship. She performed admirably at the "steamy" Asheville Show and got two points under tough breeder-judge Ed Sledzik. "Not bad for a little black girl from Atlanta".

If you want to save money and show your Lhasa where he or she can win, you need the Lhasa Judge Rating Report.

Our ratings, based on a Judges constituency of placement, goes from the best rating of 1, to the poorest rating of 5.

We used a numeric code to define a Judge's preference in nine different categories:

Size, Style, Movement, Temperament, Head, Structure, Coat, Mouth and Tail.

These preferences are based on the importance a Judge may place on a specific category, or what a Judge prefers such as SIZE: Small size, Larger size or Moderate size Lhasas.

Cost of the REPORT & updates rating 350 Judges, is just $6.00. The Lhasa Judges Report is a non-profit publication of Sentinel Consultants Inc. to improve the quality of Judging for the Lhasa breed. We welcome the input of Lhasa exhibitors, just write to us, giving us your evaluation of a Judge's preference based on your showing experience.

In July we completely updated over 100 Judges. We continue new evaluations monthly.

What's Wrong With My Dog?

Your dog can probably read you like a book. Chances are he can tell immediately when ever you're stressed out or sad or under the weather, and he'll quickly come to your side to lend a wet nose and a sympathetic whimper. But when he's sick or injured, can you read him—that is, interpret changes in his appearance, bodily functions, and behavior—to tell what might be wrong? This article will help you identify and understand common illnesses and their signs and symptoms, especially those that require your veterinarian's prompt attention and care.

When Minutes Matter

Like people, dogs sometimes have symptoms so severe in nature that it's obvious they require quick professional treatment. If you're not sure how to proceed, call your veterinarian and describe the dog's condition over the phone. He or she can then give you home care instructions or else ask you to bring in your dog for an examination.

Here are some symptoms that need immediate attention:

- Labored breathing, excessive panting, or incessant coughing
- Unusually frequent urination
- Pronounced limping or paralysis
- Marked behavioral changes.

What's Wrong With My Dog?
Continued

IF YOUR DOG GETS SICK

1. Be attentive. Familiarize yourself with your dog's habits so that you'll recognize any unusual changes in behavior.
2. Look for specific clues. Your veterinarian will want to know such details as the color or consistency of fecal matter.
3. Monitor patterns of symptoms. Be ready to tell your veterinarian when a problem began, how often it occurs, and whether the condition tends to arise at any specific time (such as mealtime, bedtime, or after exercise.)
4. Watch the clock. If mild symptoms don't disappear in 24 hours, call your veterinarian.
5. Be careful as you examine your ailing dog, who may not be in a good mood when he hurts or feel ill. Keep small children away from our dog until he's feeling better.

WHEN THE HEAT'S ON

Dehydration is a dangerous condition for your dog to develop, and if you suspect he's suffering from it, take him to a veterinarian immediately. Here's how to detect it:

1. Gently grasp the loose skin above your dog's shoulders or along his rib cage, lift it, and let it drop back into place. If the skin drops back slowly or remains bunched up, the dog may be dehydrated.
2. Look at your dog's gums; dry, sticky gums are another sign of the condition.
3. Feel your dog's nose. If it's extremely dry, it could also be a warning signal.

To prevent dehydration, never leave your dog in a closed car; when he's outdoors in the heat, always provide an accessible source of fresh water.

PILL-GIVING PRIMER

To make pill-giving easy for you and your dog, try disguised the pill in a morsel of cheese, peanut putter, or bread. If that doesn't work, follow the instructions below:

1. Carefully insert your fingers into the dog's mouth until he open it.
2. Tilt his head backward and drop the pill to the back of the throat.
3. Close his mouth and hold shut; gently stroke his throat to help him swallow.

THE PUPPY LEMON LAW

by Georgia Lewis Leonhart

Although well-intentioned, it misses the mark. Congressman Benjamin Cardin proposed it as the "Puppy Protection Act." The press calls it the "Puppy Lemon Law." The bill is H.R. 3718, and its stated purpose is "to provide remedies for consumers who purchase unfit dogs from pet dealers." Through intended to reduce dog overpopulation and "end puppy mill tragedies," the phrase "puppy mill" does not appear within the bill.

The Humane Society's Fact Sheet on Puppy Mills, being utilized to promote the bill, defines a puppy mill as "a commercial breeding facility that mass produces dogs for resale in pet stores," and accurately describes problems created by puppy-mill cruelty. Responsible dog associations fanciers and professionals support reasonable legislation designed to reduce or eliminate puppy-mill tragedies; they also support and promote responsible breeding practices, puppy care and protection for buyers of pure-bred dogs.

Despite these facts, H.R. 3718 is being vigorously opposed throughout the United States, with greatest opposition within Cardin's home state of Maryland. During 1989, the Dog Owners' Guild of Maryland, Inc. (DOG) was formed for the purpose of promoting sound legislation. DOG represents more than 500 people, consisting of individual members, veterinarians, AKC judges, attorneys and delegates from specialty clubs, all-breed and obedience clubs. DOG's membership unanimously opposes enactment of H.R. 3718 as currently written.

Why is the bill being opposed? The April 1992 Legal Agenda column discussed the legislative process a method to evaluate the reasonableness of a particular law. Applying that method to H.R. 3718 compels the conclusion that the bill is unreasonable.

1) What is the purpose of the law? The law is intended to provide remedies for people ("consumers") who purchase unfit dogs (typically coming from puppy mills) which are produced through irresponsible breeding practices, whelped in unsanitary conditions, raised in a cruel and unhealthy environment and denied the socialization and veterinary care typically required to produce healthy and stable dogs.

2) What are the traits or characteristics of the class of persons affected by the law? H.R. 3718 affects "pet dealers," defined to include "any person who, in the ordinary course of business, engages in the acquisition of dogs for resale to consumers" and "includes dog breeders who regularly have not less than three intact female dogs on the breeding premises for breeding purposes." "Pet dealers," therefore, are dog fanciers and breeders who have three unspayed bitches at their kennel or property, produce even one litter per year and sell any puppies.

3) Will enforcement of the law against those people affected fulfill the purpose of the law by promoting resolution or elimination of the underlying problem? The bill requires that the "pet dealer" provide each "consumer" with written notice of his rights and remedies, as well as the obligations of the pet dealer under the Act, orally explain the contents of the written notice and obtain a written acknowledgement from each consumer that he fully understands the contents of the notice; conspicuously display the notice upon the premises; and maintain sales records for a two-year period following a sale.

The causes of action (those things which would allow the purchaser of any puppy to seek remedies and recovery) give more cause for concern. An unfit dog, under the Act, would be one which: 1) a veterinarian finds, within 14 days of purchase, to have any illness or disease; 2) succumbs to death or any physical ailment or unsoundness not caused by accident or injury sustained within the 14-day period; 3) evidences any internal or external parasite "that imposes a health risk to the dog" or, 4) exhibits any distressed, disturbed or antisocial behavior resulting from conditions existing prior to the purchase of the dog, rendering it unfit as a pet. Within one year, remedies are allowed if a veterinarian certifies the dog is not of the breed represented as being, and within two years if the dog exhibits any hereditary or congenital disorder that adversely affects the health of the dog.

These causes of action are unreasonably over-broad and subjective, nearing the point of absurdity. Anything can happen within a 14-day period. Regarding hereditary or congenital disorders appearing within two years of purchase, even gives the best of intentions coupled with extensive research, knowledge and responsibility, no person can so completely guarantee the health of any living thing.

The remedies include the right of return, refund and reimbursement for any vet costs incurred up to three times the price of the dog. Additional civil penalties may also be imposed.

The answer to the third question, therefore, is a resounding "No." Although the bill would affect pet stores, it most strongly impacts against the people actively involved in producing quality dogs of good temperament and in promoting informed, responsible dog ownership. Illogically, the bill does not affect most of the people who are responsible for the underlying problem, i.e., backyard breeders and irresponsible dog owners who allow dogs to run loose and procreate at will.

Puppy mills are already covered by the Animal Welfare Act. Federal enforcement procedures are available, but unfortunately not effectively utilized. As stated by Lori Jones, a founder and current president of DOG, "This bill penalizes responsible owners and breeders as opposed to requiring enforcement of existing regulations."

Cardin's intentions are good, but this bill as written is severely flawed and unreasonable. For further information write to Lori S. Jones, DOG, P.O. Box 103, Fairplay, MD 21733.

Update: The AKC's Canine Legislation Department reported that because of much opposition from the dog fancy nationwide, Cardin has announced he will not pursue H.R. 3718 and introduced. A new bill could be introduced in Congress next January.

Ms. Leonhart is an attorney actively involved in dog-related litigation.

(Ch. Tall Oaks Sharil Just A Rumor x Ch. Tall Oaks Soarin' Sadie)

Judge: Mary Ann Strysick
Breeders: Cherlynn Jozwick and A. Kay Shaner
Owners: Cherlynn Jozwick, Amy Andrews, and A. Kay Shaner
Handler: "Momma" Kay

We are proud to flaunt "Flyer", our second homebred Grand Futurity winner. Thank you, judge Mary Ann Strysick for this wonderful honor! We feel our wins under breeder/judges are testimony to the quality and correct type evident in our breeding program. "Flyer" is major pointed from the puppy class, owner handled exclusively! "Flyer" and his sire, "Phil" are at stud here at SHARIL.

OwnerHandled All The Way!

We were thrilled when "Crackers" completed his American championship in August under judge Betty Krause, giving our beloved "Bear" his ROM. Best wishes to his owners, Debbie Siminski and Jo-Janet Holden for their fine job of handling and conditioning this smart little red guy (10 1/8" tall!). Your dedication and friendship are cherished.

Ch. Sharil's Believe It Or Not
Ch. Sharil's Bubblicious
Ch. Mio's Pay The Piper
Ch. Sharil Fyrecracker
(Grand Placer from the Classes)

Several more of his get, including an all show quality litter, are currently in Germany with breeders Karen Acker, Gerti Bracksieck, and Kristen Handrich.

We were proud of Bear's pure Hamilton pedigree, his gorgeous red coat, his perfect front and bite, his arching neck. But most of all, we expound on his loving, giving temperament whose daily regimen included burying his head in my neck and snorting his affection.

Magic makes Science Diet vanish!
The mature Lhasa Apso in full coat portrays the very essence of beauty and style, and can be appreciated by the novice as well as those very familiar with the breed. Because of the coat, some find it difficult to judge the Lhasa, whereas familiarity with coat movement betrays faults even more obviously than some of the scissored or shaped breeds.

Breed characteristic (or type) is what we see first when the Lhasa walks into the ring or the living room, and should never be confused with balance or structure. While both are basic ingredients, they must never dominate, but only append type. We as breeders can take some liberties with type when striving for soundness, but what we take into the ring should always exemplify type.

Breeders and judges often speak of the many different types of Lhasas that appear in the rings around the world, when I would assume they refer to styles rather than type. There are certain characteristics that are very important to type; i.e. a flat, form fitting coat that does not obscure the outline...the tail well over the back and upright head carriage...the rectangular rather than square shape...all contribute to the "look" that says - Lhasa Apso!

While structure is very important to proper movement and good topline, excellent type does not wholly depend on it. If you select only on the basis of structure (whether in the ring or the litter box), breed characteristics may be lost, only to be replaced with sound, mediocre dogs that lack type and balance, as well as type. Since the Lhasa is a basically normal structured dog, it is easier to pick up on faults in construction than quality in type and balance. Our standard makes this apparent, for example, when allowing for a less than perfectly straight front, while requesting it as a ideal to work toward.

The Lhasa Apso was referred to as the "Lhasa Terrier" at one time, and the term fits him well - an agile, small dog of medium bone and substance - never coarse or overdone. A long rib cage, coupled with a short, strong loin gives him strength...the slightly achondroplastic or shorted leg keeps him from the "square" appearance of the Poodle or Tibetan Terrier, without lending itself to the long body subject to various structural problems and lack of balance. This accounts for the Lhasa weighing heavier than he looks - he is never racy, or toxious, or fragile in appearance.

The term "balance" is much like "beauty" and apparent in the eye of the beholder. A superior judge is often referred to as having a "good eye" for a dog and is fortunate to be able to quickly assess the overall balance (and type) of the dogs in the ring. Good balance in the Dachshund or boxer would never fit the Lhasa, so the matter of defining balance can be tricky, at best.

For one thing, balance in any breed can never be acquired by training, handling or grooming...only enhanced. Style is another matter entirely; temperament, training, conditioning, and handling are very important to style. Add to this some exaggeration of type, and Voila! a new style is introduced. While most breeders agree on the basic correct type, we all have our preferences in style that we cling to. It has been my good fortune to exhibit, as well as see dogs shown in Europe, Canada and the United States...and I see less variation in type than might be expected. Imports and exports have done well overall, demonstrating that breeders are doing a good job with the Lhasa.

Those breeders and judges who have not come from multi-breed background tend to view the Lhasa as a very unique small canine. There is a tendency to place more importance on individual detail rather than the overall picture. I have seen Lhasas with lovely type and balance thrown out because of a faulty mouth, toeing out in front, or even incorrect eye shape...when there was nothing comparable in overall quality in the ring. Breeders do this many times when choosing puppies to keep from a litter - evaluating with a fine tooth comb, picking on minor details that offend them personally, and overlooking those dogs that could really help their breeding program.

You may have heard breeders or judges lamenting the proliferation of new types, wishing to go back twenty or more years to the original "correct" type. Thanks to the miracle of home movies and videos, we can go back and see some of the great old dogs that made such an impact on our breed many years ago, and we discover that while type has not changed, we see a vast improvement in presentation, structure and attitude. Temperament is our Lhasas is of primary importance, even before type...possibly the only thing as important is good health and lack of genetic defects. It's an old adage, but very true...ninety percent of our Lhasas go into pet homes - and there we must provide stable, intelligent animals that speak well for our breed.

Because Lhasas are shown with more "style" today, they do contrast with what we remember...but the basic type remains unchanged. Some of the original breeders in the United States put their stamp on the breed in the early days, changing the agile little mountain dog into a rather cumbersome, low-stationed and heavier dog with voluminous coat. Some of these Lhasas would have had trouble negotiating a steep incline, much less the rock outcroppings of their Tibetan homeland! Although kept as treasured guardians of the Potala, Lhasas depicted by old photographs as the original imports were never coarse or dragging in coat. We have changed our Lhasas into "hothouse flowers"...placing more emphasis on quantity of coat, rather than the preferred hard, straight texture...forced to confine them to exercise pens, using every cosmetic means at our disposal to give the appearance of proper condition. Not only is this a disservice to our Lhasas, but the average pet buyer is unable to cope with the necessary stringent coat care, and usually resorts to shaving or trimming which detracts from general appearance.

What can we as breeders and judges do to retain original Lhasa type without sacrificing soundness and style.

1. First, we must never confuse poor structure with correct type. In other words, to have poor shoulder construction with resulting loss of neck and head carriage is not excused by saying the Standard does not reference neck...this is a normal canine, and what is considered normal structure is appropriate to the Lhasa. Steep croups with low-set tails coupled with shoulders set too far forward on the ribcage are not the correct way to get the rectangular look of the Lhasa, or is the long, narrow and weak loin which gives the same appearance.
This ad is to correct a mistake made on page 22 in Lhasas Unlimited Summer 1992 edition. Correction follows:

Ch Mi-Su Oregon Miss T and daughter, Mi-Su Honey Do-Rite did not win Best Brace at the ALAC National in Detroit in 1991. They won at the ALAC National in Denver in 1988, handled by breeder/owner Lois Wade. The winning Brace in Detroit in 1991 was BISS CH Bala's Sugar Free and daughter, Bala's Hot Lips Houlihan, bred and handled by Brenda Schmelze.

The information submitted to Lhasas Unlimited for the Summer 1992 edition was not obtained from the breeder/owner/handler of either Brace.

2. Long, straight legs belong on the Terrier, not the Lhasa Apso...while bowed and crooked legs are incorrect, it's impossible to put a Terrier front on an achondroplastic dog such as the Lhasa without losing the Lhasa look. (In an effort to improve fronts, we may get animals too tall, too square or too rangy.)

3. We must be able to accurately assess balance on the Lhasa without being influenced by hair and handling - this is why the more Lhasas we can get our hands on, the easier it becomes to determine the norm for the breed. While the differences are very slight, they can make a big difference in outline and general stance. A Lhasa that might appear square to the inexperienced eye may in reality be found to be the proper length in body in a "hands on" situation; remember, we want "longer than tall" but not as long as to lose balance.

4. Don't be misled into believing one line is superior to another by virtue of being original...Lhasas have been mixed lot from their inception, coming as they do from an area where strict breeding practices have never been defined, and various small, shaggy dogs of several origins were combined to make up what we call the "Lhasa". Although the original imports were kept in a strict breeding program, their offspring were influenced by the various prejudices of their owners who changed them to suit their fancy...but today our Lhasas are a blend of the best from all lines.

With the current emphasis on more and more coat, the practice of showing everything on a tight lead at breakneck speed, type and style is definitely being changed to favor the "win at any cost Showdog". I have always been a strong proponent of fluid, unrestrained movement in the Lhasa, but at their own pace...and find it offensive to be told to slow a dog down, when doing so can interrupt the fait and throw the dog off balance. If a dog is made well, and can move out well on a loose lead, he shouldn't be penalized for that.

The Lhasa Apso in the United States is in the hands of a dedicated, hard working group of people who love the breed, and are determined to foster their best interests by supporting educational seminars such as these, promoting responsible breeding and ownership, while continuing exciting breeding programs. The future for the Lhasa looks great as we move forward - won't you join us?

Most dog owners, expert authorities and veterinarians recommend dog cages (also known as crates) as the best way to raise a puppy.

Nicki Meyer, a nationally known authority on the subject of crate training, says that according to a recent survey, the majority of dog owners were initially opposed to crates but were later typically supportive and enthusiastic, "He loves his crate...I don't believe it." "I'd never raise another dog without a crate." "It saved my sanity." "It makes traveling with a dog a delight." "Thanks to the crate, our puppy is always a pleasure and never a problem." "It's the best way to housebreak a puppy."

The dog crate is a sanctuary for your pet. It is your pet's well protected home. "Not so much that it (your pet) cannot get out, but that humans cannot get in," according to a recent release from a major pet food manufacturer. The pet crate is comfortable to your puppy because, like his wild ancestors, he instinctively seeks the safety and security of a "den." The fact that we may see the crate as a very limited space, or very confining, is only a human view. The dog finds a crate a secure haven, more secure than the confusing and sometimes frightening outside world.

The most important benefit that accrues to the pet owner who utilized crate training is the control of the puppy when it is alone at home. When puppies are left alone and allowed to roam too large an area, they become anxious, lonely and bored. By using a pet crate, the owner creates positive behavioral patterns which enable the relationship between the pet and his owner to develop and grow.

Consider, too, these additional benefits:

- The virtual elimination of "housetraining" problems and attendant "accidents" in the house.
- The savings in dollars in costs to repair or replace damaged household items.
- An assurance that the puppy will develop good habits.
- Eliminating the likelihood of having to give up a pet because of not being able to cope with its behavioral problems.

A wire crate is recommended because of proper ventilation and visibility. If a puppy can not see where strange noises are coming from, it may become frightened and develop bad habits.

TIPS FOR CRATE TRAINING

_by Nicki Meyer_

- Make sure that your attitude toward using a dog crate is a positive one. Remember, that you are doing your puppy a real favor. "Crate Training" will reduce fear, insecurity, and stress related problems for your puppy.
- Use a collapsible crate with an epoxy-coated floor pan large enough for an adult size dog to stretch out comfortably. A smaller space for the puppy can be created by sliding cardboard or a piece of masonite between the wires of the crate. When the puppy grows, the partition can be removed.
- Keep the crate in a semi-private spot in a "people" area (such as the kitchen or family room). This spot should be away from drafts and direct heat.

CRATE TRAINING
YOUR PET'S HOME

* Well before bedtime, place the pup in the crate and offer a treat. Close and lock the gate.
* Immediately establish a routine, using the crate for nap times and whenever the puppy must be left alone (3-4 hours). Take it directly from the crate to your chosen outside elimination spot, praise his performance, and go directly inside. The puppy will then be able to make the association. Your relationship with your pet will be enhanced if you keep its life structured.
* Treat any resistance to crate confinement in a “no nonsense” manner. Remember, you are not being cruel. At the first sign of any separation responses (such as barking or howling), intervene with a sharply raised voice. The idea is that the pup associates its behavior with the startling raised voice. Some pups will not respond to a raised voice, but most will respond to the sounds of a shaker can (a coffee can with a few coins) or a newspaper slapped sharply against a door.
* Usually the pup settles quietly in the crate after three to eight attempts at emotional responses. After the puppy is quiet, keep it inside for about 10 minutes. Do not praise the pup immediately after releasing it. This can reinforce the desirability of leaving the crate.
* After an interval of 30-45 minutes, repeat the procedure. Extend the pup’s quiet time to about 30 minutes. Then gradually extend your absent periods, and, in a short time, you can be gone for several hours.
* Provide soft washable bedding (such as a towel or bath mat) and one safe chew toy in the crate. Other than treats, do no put food or water inside the crate. Remove a collar and tags to prevent possible entanglement.

Remember:

A secure dog is a happier dog—with a happier owner!

LAWN CHEMICAL CAN POSE HEALTH HAZARDS TO ANIMALS

Many pets are brought to veterinarians with mysterious ailments that later are traced to lawn treatments and pesticides. Reactions range from life-threatening episodes resembling other types of poisoning responses to acute allergic responses.

Through many of these toxic substances also have short- and long-term effects on human health, they pose a special risk for pets because animals are smaller and closer to the ground to absorb chemicals through the skin, by inhalation of dust or spray and nibbling on plants and grass.

If you hire a lawn or garden-care service, obtain the names of the products it intends to use and a list of the ingredients in each one. Ask about non-chemical alternatives.

Remove all pets from the area and close doors and windows tight when you or neighbors are applying chemicals. For possible future information needed by the veterinarian or poison control center, keep a list of product names and their ingredients used by garden-care companies. Keep empty chemical containers in a safe place.

Try to keep pets off treated areas for at least a week after application.

Symptoms of mild or severe poisoning may include—but aren’t limited to—skin rashes, drooling, sneezing, coughing, muscle pain, cramps, diarrhea and seizures. If these symptoms appear and you suspect chemicals, take the pet to a vet as soon as possible.

Check locally for firms that sell natural garden products, and send for catalogs of companies that supply non-toxic or low-toxic garden applications. AN IMPORTANT MESSAGE
TO DOG SHOW EXHIBITORS
by Peggy A. Hogg

On September 8, 1991, “Cody,” a 1 1/2 year-old Shih Tzu was stolen from his cage during a dog show in Iowa.

The above sentence says it all but I must write on to tell you how easily it can happen. I sincerely hope it has an impact on you and that you will realize it can happen to any of you leaving your dog for only a short while during the show. It's not a happy story and does not have a happy ending as of now, but if it will make us more aware and careful, it is worth telling.

“Cody” was not a big-winning Special, it was only his 2nd weekend of shows. The results of his late start on his championship had been rewarding as he was almost halfway to his title and that day won a 4 point major and BOB over a special. After showing him in the toy group, I brushed out and rubber-banded his top knot and face, exercised and watered him and put him in his crate to rest. It had been a long day as Shih Tzu had shown much earlier and I went to get a bite to eat there at the show. Upon returning to my set-up about 25 minutes later, I was shocked to see “Cody” was not in his cage. I immediately went to a friend set up only 15 feet away thinking she probably had him in her ex-pen or crate, maybe he had started barking and she thought he needed to be exercised. When she said she didn’t have him I frantically asked everyone in the area if they had him or had seen him as this was an enclosed show, not an outside show. I can’t describe the feeling that came over me when everyone replied no. The show was still going on and many people were still there — it was the middle day of a cluster of shows and no one was leaving to go home. The announcement was made over the PA system but no one came forward to say they had seen the dog. “Cody” is a very friendly Shih Tzu and even if let out of his cage would have gone to the first person he saw and jumped up on them wagging his tail for attention.

The only information we could gather was from a poodle handler set up close by who saw a woman and man set their size 200 cage near my cages. He noticed she kept fussing around on the floor while the man stood 4-5 feet from her. All of us who attend shows know what dog show confusion is, people coming and going, owners getting their dogs out of handler’s crates to see them or even to take them home. He did watch her for awhile, but he also had been in the toy group and had his string of dogs to do about and get back to the motel. We don’t know if it was this man and woman, but in retrospect I can’t help but feel it probably was. I’m personally praying it was the couple that asked me, just as I was preparing to go to the group, what kind of dog I had and the woman stated, “It’s the most beautiful dog I’ve ever seen in my life.” If, in fact, it was that couple they are probably giving “Cody” a good home and caring for him. If it was the other couple, who knows what fate held for “Cody.” Is he in a puppy mill, was he sold with fictitious papers or even shipped out of the country, was it a dog activist group? I’m enraged at what kind of person would do this but the real agony is not knowing if he is being cared for. You can’t control your thoughts from the very worst that might happen to the happy, healthy dog you raised with love and care and protected from the heat and cold and other health hazards. I hope none of you have to experience this nightmare that continues to go through my mind.

The cooperation and sincere concern of the showing kennel club has been far and above the call of duty. The dog is my responsibility at the show and the disclaimer on any premium list states so and I have no one to blame but myself. However, they have sent out 150 letters to groomers in the area, all veterinarians in the area contacted, plus the Humane Society and State inspection officials. I covered the fairgrounds twice, both that day and the next and searched in nearby neighborhoods. I placed an appeal in the newspaper for whoever took the dog to call and just say “Cody” was all right and being cared for. To this date I have heard nothing.

I am very appreciative of calls from dog people in all parts of the U.S. offering their regrets and any service they might render. In talking to some of them I was informed that dog activist groups are strong and growing, especially on each coast as well as the south. These groups not only let dogs loose from their cages, they take them from the premises. Yes, I know it’s shocking and unbelievable but we should be aware of this — some shows in some areas have employed patrols in defense of such actions.

To anyone that reads “Cody’s” story, I cannot stress enough the importance of being aware this can happen to you so easily. Evidently these people, whether dog activists or otherwise, watch for an opportunity when you are not with your dog and even a trip to the bathroom affords them the chance to move in and take your dog.

If someone is right next to you and you have to leave for any reason ask that person if they will be able to watch your dogs and be sure that you know that person will do so. I have resorted to locks on my crates and heavy wire cable looping through the handles and padlocked to the upper part of the grooming table. I realize this is not ideal in case a dog gets in trouble, no one can get it out — but in case of an emergency you are on the grounds and can be paged to return quickly with the master key. I'd much rather have a dog that has gone to the bathroom in his cage to bathe out, rather than have no dog to bathe out. Heaven forbid that you leave the grounds without your dog, those days are over as far as I am concerned.

One other important point I want to stress is cooperation in looking out for the welfare of other exhibitor's dogs. If you see anything suspicious going on at someone else's crates, step forward and insist that person return later or wait until the owner or handler returns. It might make an owner that has employed a handler mad at the time but I think they will thank you for it later when they realize it's for their own dog's safety. We must work together to protect our dogs. I hate to think we have to take precautions like this at our dog shows now, but we do and must do everything we can to protect our dogs. In conversations about this incident, I have learned that this is not an isolated incident and may well be on the increase.

My heart still aches for "Cody's" well-being. I have no real hope of ever knowing where he is or finding him but hopefully my little Shih Tzu can play an important role by having his story told and perhaps saving another dog from being a victim. Our dogs depend on us for their quality of life and protection. "Cody," I'm so sorry I failed.
