Since the day she entered our lives, Molly has been the object of our love and adoration. With her undauntable spirit and her "look-at-me" attitude, she is a show dog through and through. Stepping into the ring beside her is a thrill I shall always treasure, for it is then that she does what she love most... floating around the ring, her head held high, so "full of herself" she can hardly keep from leaping through the air (which she has, on occasion, been known to do). She will always be our "epitome of femininity and charm!"

Gizmo shown getting her first major under Mr Lewis Bayne. She finished under Jane Forsyth at El Paso KC. The next day went BOB over a winning male special, who her sire beat in California.

Thanks Mike Shea for saying what a nice “Special” bitch she was, as he saw her get her BOB.

C. L. said she worked hard and is such a “sweety”, Now she’s taking a rest. We’re thinking of breeding her soon to BISS Ch Wynwood’s Fuzzbuster. We want to say here, we were sorry about Pat Chenoweth, as Gizzy’s Mom is down from Krissy & Khori. Her dogs are missed and she will be too. They are in many pedigrees.

Thank you to the judges and handlers that helped to finish Gizzy. Special thank you to C. L. Eudy, Jean Fergus and Linda Allen.
After a two year hiatus (due to Mom Patty’s back problems) we finished in grand style with a three point major under Judge Elaine Rigdon on October 30, 1993.

Black- and red hot October 30, 1993 at the Lhasa Apso of Canada Specialty! Bonnie completed her Canadian Championship in 4 consecutive shows. When moved up to Specials for two outings, she was BOS at the Lhasa Apso Canada Booster under Judge Ito of Japan and BOS at the Lhasa Apso Specialty under Judge Edd E. Biven. Both these wins were over multiple group winning BIS Specials. Thank you Arlene for letting me have Bonnie. She will be shown in the US in 1994.
Dear ALAC Members,

By the time you have read this the Board will be meeting shortly (or have already met). I will catch you up on everything the Board covers in the next Bulletin.

Don't forget that the Futurities are sooner this year. April and May. The dates and places can be found on page 28 of the Bulletin. Makes sure you don't miss out. You could be one of the 12 competing at the National for Grand Futurity Winner and the Griffing Award. Lastly, the Annual Election results will be announced at the National in June.

My message is short this month. Bob Schrank, my friend and companion died January 15th. Bob was not a driving force in the breeding and showing of Lhasas, but he could often be seen at ring side enjoying himself. He loved to watch and analyze the dogs. He had his own champion, Kymba-Rimar Rosie O'Grady.

In addition, my condolences to the friends and family of Pat Chanoweth and Frances Setton who have recently passed away.

Steve

Dear ALAC Members:

I'd like to bring few items to your attention. First of all, the breeder referral list is in desperate need of revising. Many of you have new area codes of which ALAC is not aware and many areas of the country are not represented. We are especially in need of breeders interested in being referred in states:

Connecticut, Maine, Montana
North and South Dakota, Nevada, Idaho
Wyoming, Kansas, Nebraska
Arkansas, Alabama, Alaska

Please help ALAC assist the inquiring public! The fact that a caller has sought out the BEST place to get information or a puppy should not be countered with an inability to send them to a breeder in their state. If you wish your name and services added to the list, contact me ASAP. As stated at the Annual meeting, copies of the list are also available to members.

Secondly, a Board certified opthalmologist from the University of Georgia has contacted our Club. She is in need of Lhasa Apsos with verified cases of Dry Eye for a new drug study to take place at the University. A total of sixteen (16) dogs will be required for the four month study. The grant she is working under permits her to purchase the dogs outright or return the dog(s) to the owner with any corrective surgery and/or required medications at no charge. Dry eye is a VERY widespread problem in the breed; half the reason is many vets don't recognize it and many of those that do fail to treat it aggressively and early enough before tear production is barely negligible.

According to the veterinarian conducting the study, Dry Eye is an extremely painful problem in humans as well and Lhasa Apsos are one of the few breeds that have cases without secondary effects, identical to the human version. This study will not only help the canine population in its treatment of the disease but the data will be useful in helping afflicted humans as well! Those breeders interested in participating in the study should contact Renee Kafwan DVM at (706) 542-2376 or her technician Tyran Therman at the same number. The study has an account at Delta Dash and animals will be shipped at the University's expense.

Minutes from the 1992 and 1993 Board and Annual meetings were mailed before Christmas. If any member did not receive them by now but wishes a copy, contact me. Also included in that packet was the 1995 Futurity Judge Nomination Form. The deadline for returning the form to Ann Lanterman, Futurity Secretary, is February 25, 1994. If you did not receive the form, contact Ann and one will be sent. The form has been revised from the one in the Handbook, complete with the new Futurity regulations and requiring only ONE signature from a nominator (the previous version required three). If members have any questions about the Judge or Litter nomination procedure, contact Ann.

Yearbook Applications for the 1993 issue are currently being mailed. For those who did not receive theirs, one is printed in this issue of the Bulletin.

DEADLINE IS APRIL 1st. I'm really excited about this issue as it will bring us up to date and will be the first single year issue since 1982! If you have any questions about the application or the guidelines for publication eligibility, call me. The Yearbook will again be available at the National Specialty!

The Board is currently in the process of selecting the nominating committee for 1994-95. Their report will be hastened by the earlier Specialty date for this year (June 15th as opposed to July 4th). Since the results of the general membership voting must be tabulated for announcement at the Annual meeting, elections will be conducted by an APRIL 1st DEADLINE. Please keep this in mind, especially for those members running from the floor, when participating in the elections. As usual, the general membership will, at the appropriate times, be kept apprised of the deadlines and sent the corresponding forms and instructions.

The Board has not conducted additional motions by mail at this time other than to choose a Board meeting time and place.

By now, the Board has met for their February meeting. I plan to have the minutes available for mailing and publication by April. If any member has a question concerning the meeting, please contact any Board member.

Thanks Ruth Hatcher, Rhu Ha Lhasas, for taking in this abandoned little girl and truly making her a star. Under your expert guidance "Star" finished quickly with a 4 point major (pictured above) and produced an exquisite litter of 6, sired by the infamous "George". Of course, four of them are black and beautiful like their mom and 2 are gorgeous redheads like their dad.

Dogs Whelped between Jan 1 - Sept 30 are eligible for this year's Futurity. If you have had a litter in the last 90 days make sure that you send you nominations to Ann Lanterman. There is a Futurity form conveniently located on page 36. Futurities will be held during April and May with the Best Adult and Best Puppy going to the National for the Grand Futurity Competition. This is a new format and promises to be very exciting.

Lhasa Apso Colors: Are They Really Created Equal?

by Carolyn Herbel

According to the AKC Breed Standard, "All colors (are) equally acceptable with or without dark tips to ears and beard." The many colors allowed for the Lhasa Apso breed offer a great deal of variety and individuality. Virtually every color that is found in the canine world is not only found in the Lhasa Apso breed but is also recognized by the American Kennel Club when registering a puppy.

The standard colors that appear on the AKC's individual registration form are black; black and tan; cream; golden; grizzle; red; red gold and white. The second choice in describing a color is the marking/pattern portion of the form which consists of black mask with tips; black tips; brindle; parti-color; sable and white markings.

The definitions of the standard colors and markings/patterns are as follows:

- Black -- solid black
- Black and tan -- typical black and tan markings, i.e., black body color with tan spots above eyes, on cheeks, on muzzle, chest, legs and vent
- Cream -- almost white to darker shades of cream
- Golden -- pale gold to wheaten
- Grizzle -- bluish-gray or iron-gray color due to an admixture of black and white hairs
- Red -- solid red with shades from Viszla red to Irish Setter red
- Red gold -- dark apricot to light red
- White -- solid white
- Black mask with tips -- dark shading of varying degrees about the head, ears, legs and tail, i.e., dark points
- Black tips -- black tipped hairs, i.e., sable
- Brindle -- a color pattern produced by the presence of darker hairs forming bands and giving a striped effect on a background of cream, gold or red
- Parti-color -- a color pattern broken up into two or more colors, one of which is white, in more or less equal proportions
- Sable -- a color pattern produced by black-tipped hairs overlaid upon a background of gold, cream, red or red gold
- White markings -- white on colored background usually on one or a combination of legs, chest, collar, blaze, muzzle or tail tip

Additionally the AKC provides alternate color descriptions to be written on the line at the bottom of the color section. These alternate color descriptions are as follows with definitions:

- Silver -- admixture of cream and black, charcoal or gray, i.e., cream sable or cream grizzle
- Liver -- (or brown or chocolate) deep reddish brown with self-colored liver skin pigment
- Charcoal -- dark slate gray - i.e., faded black
- Blue -- a dilution of black, either light or dark blue-gray with self-colored blue skin pigment
- Sable with white markings -- this is a combination of two marking/pattern descriptions and needs only to have a standard color added to identify the sable base color

There are sometimes different names for the colors described above but these are the official AKC descriptions for all of those many Lhasa Apso colors.

Are all Lhasa Apso colors equal? Yes, when they are being registered. No, when adhering to the AKC breed Standard. The standard says under the head section -- "Nose black,--." This, I believe, should eliminate from the show ring the dilute colors liver and blue which do not have black noses. Additionally, I believe that these dogs should not be bred as they do not adhere to the parameter of the standard.

Some fanciers conjecture that there is not equality of colors in the show ring today. I have briefly reviewed my research materials in an attempt to verify or negate that notion.

Combining the top 20 producers and the top winners in the history of the breed, I found by using the standard colors (and not including the marking/pattern variations) that there were 15 gold, six red, six red gold, eight cream, two white, one black with white markings and one gray parti-color.

Of the sires, all were variations of golden, red golden, red or cream, with the top five being golden. The dams were all variations of golden, red or cream sables except one was black and the top one white.

Based upon my research it does seem that there is a predominance of lighter colors in the breed. This is probably because there are more of these dogs. Originally there was a color preference for gold. Perhaps we are still suffering from that prejudice. It seems that we see more of the dark colors, i.e., black, red sable, grizzle and brindle as well as parti-colors in all recognized colors winning in the classes but not consistently winning the top spots.

I hope this lack of success in the show ring for the less popular colors is not due to the color, but simply because the quality dogs are not being campaigned. All colors with black noses are indeed created equal for the show ring and the whelping box.

New Antifreeze On The Market, Truly Is An Advance In Pet Safety

Every so often, a development will occur in veterinary medicine that is of major significance to the profession. One such event has just occurred and will have a big impact on your pet’s safety.

Safe Brand Inc. has just begun national marketing of its Sierra antifreeze. This antifreeze is non-toxic to animals and pet. Before this year, we have not had any choice in the type of antifreeze we purchased. You could only get one with ethylene glycol as its active ingredient.

In the past, veterinarians have had to deal with antifreeze poisoning, and with very poor results. By the time the pet is diagnosed and treatment begun, the destruction to the kidneys is usually so severe and permanent that the pet is not able to be saved. This is compounded by the fact that the symptoms are not very specific, making initial diagnosis difficult, unless it was suspected the pet was drinking the antifreeze off the driveway or garage floor. Most pets find it good to the taste because it is very sweet.

This past year in Newport News, several animals were killed as a result of careless placement of antifreeze waste. After several cats were treated at the Emergency Hospital and my hospital, it was apparent they all were from the same neighborhood. All died. After the neighbors banded together, an open container of antifreeze was found.

It was incidents such as this that prompted Safe Brand Corp. to develop a safe auto coolant.

This Sierra antifreeze, with a propylene glycol active ingredient, was developed and test-marketed in the states of Washington and Idaho in 1991 and 1992. It was very successful. It has the same properties in boil-over protection and corrosive resistance as the ethylene glycol brands, but it has one very important additional property. It is safe.

The company does recommend that if you decide to switch to Sierra antifreeze, that you make the change completely. Do not mix it with your existing antifreeze.

Local sources for Sierra include Pep Boys, which has stores in various states. A gallon of Sierra sells for $4.94, says Dave Moody, parts manager of the Hampton, VA store. He adds that the price is about the same as other major brands of antifreeze and a dollar or two more expensive than less known brands.

Dear Susan:

The last ALAC Bulletin was super good! I receive lots and lots of publications and truly digest the better ones. I do enjoy yours! It did however, start a thought trend that you might care to expose. If you would like to print the enclosed in its entirety please feel free and if not just sent it back. Best wishes!

Is there something wrong with the Lhasa Apso Standard? If so why does the Parent Club not change the thing and if there is nothing wrong with the standard why do the breeders not use it? The Lhasa standard is one of the shortest most concise standards that is approved by the AKC and is so easy to understand that any ten year old child could grasp the precise clear wording. Yet this person cannot understand why the breeders cannot adhere to the dictates of this brief to the point outline of their breed. Is it possible that they are unable to comply or do they just not care? By now some of you may be asking who is this guy criticizing us good breeders and why would he question us right out of the blue!

No, I am not a Lhasa breeder and in fact have not owned one, but I am one who loves the breed and perhaps am more concerned about it than some breeders who have produced hundred of puppies. I am an AKC approved judge for 5 groups, Non Sporting being one of these five! I have been judging Lhasas since 1983 all over the country and in other sections of the world. A really deep regard for the breed has developed with my contact with the breed. I am very prone to place Lhasas Group One and seem to draw good entries time after time and frankly I have been known to lecture Lhasa exhibitors when I have become overly concerned. I just care! I just care and in my opinion the breed is progressing in diverse directions. Now what does this mean?

Firstly one direction of progression is toward a cover up! Lovely long coats, heavy head furnishings and everything well feathered. The other direction is the thing that concerns me! So often we approach the table where a beautifully coated and groomed Lhasa stands for examination. Then to look at the head... The standard says; Muzzle of medium length: the length from tip of nose to eye to be roughly about one-third of the total length from nose to back of skull. And oh so often a judge can push back all the head furnishings and see a Shih Tzu face staring up at you with a tiny-inch long muzzle and big round bold eyes. Can't breeders understand the standard says muzzle one third length of back skull, if the foreface is one inch the back skull should be two inches according to your standard.

The diverse direction that concerns me the most deals not with the head, but the front. The standard indicates legs - Forelegs straight: Forelegs straight: Forelegs straight: Kinda simple short to the point type of little sentence is it not? Why do so many of your Lhasas today have the most deformed bowed front that cam be imagined? Not the pet type alone, but some of your top winners have the front that would even be faulty on a Peke which is required to have a bowed front. Now if bowed fronts is what the Parent Club would like to see in Lhasa Apsos why not sit down and write the AKC and say, "We want a standard change to have bowed fronts acceptable!" Put it to a vote and ask the membership if they would like to approve fiddle fronts where the pasterns touch each other, because if you deny that type is being shown, you are only kidding yourself! If you accept the standard why not insist on proper fronts? It appears that some breeders would rather breed for more hair to cover those bowed fiddle fronts.

By now you might rightfully ask, what rang his bell or who rattled his chain and you deserve a answer. Not too long ago I was watching a breeder judge do a Lhasa Specialty with an Observer in the ring who was trying to learn how to judge Lhasas. Nice big entry, lots of heavily coated dogs presented to all the world as models of perfection. During a break I commented to the judge on my longtime love of the Lhasa Apso and confided in the fact that I could not understand how the breeders year after year could go on breeding dogs that violate the standard. I was asked what I mean and responded with my concerns for deformed fronts in the breed. The breeder judge responded with the shocker that set me on my heels! This judge teaching the Observer said, "I never look at fronts!". So now, looking at the tremendously grand ALAC Bulletin put out by Ms. Giles I just sort of wondered are there any others out there who share my concern with diverse progress in the breed?
Tai is shown taking his first major at 10 months. He was handled by C. L. Eudy, (not shown above). Thank you C. L. for this win on our boy. The Hand...

Four of a Kind!
The news of Francis Sefton's illness and death came as a great shock to members of the dog fraternity and the Lhasa world in particular.

Frankie's Cheska prefix is known worldwide over a period of many years. Although Frankie had been involved in other breeds, including Pugs, Pekingese and Miniature Pinchers, her interest in Lhasas lasted for over three decades and continued unabated until her death.

In 1962 Frankie made enquiries about obtaining a Lhasa bitch from Sherpa Tensing and in due course Jeri of Cheska arrived in the UK. Frankie's experience with her Tibetan bitch made a great impression and influenced her love of the breed's individual temperament.

Frankie and her husband Derick bought stock from a variety of sources and in 1969 won the first English Lhasa Apso Club Championship Show with their Eng. Ch. Tayung of Coburg, Ch. Cheska Jesta being runner-up. A number of dogs owned or bred by the Seftons were influential in the breed in England, the most famous being Eng. & Aust. Ch. Cheska Jesta, the CC record holder for many years, and Eng. Ch. Cheska Alexander of Sternroc, the first Lhasa to win BIS at an English Championship Show and co-owned by Pamela Cross Stern.

The Sefton's made the big decision to emigrate to Australia. Unfortunately their breeding program was then struck a major blow by the imposing of a complete import ban by Australian Quarantine Authorities. The Sefton's still came, but all the dogs accompanying them could not and when the import ban was lifted two years' latter some different choices had to be made. Whilst waiting for their dogs to arrive Frankie bought a Tesering bitch and Derick showed a Shih Tzu from Tony & Sue Dobson, Waynelli Finito.

Before the dogs left England Jesta was mated to her ½ brother Eng. Ch. Cheska Gregor and the famous story of the resulting litter arriving as the boat steamed into Sydney Harbour needs no retelling. From that litter came Australian Champions Archee, Annabelle and Anthea and the influential brood bitch Alice.

The original imports were followed over the years by several more - Ch. Rufus of Cheska, Ch. Showa Dynamatic, Ch. Sternroc Eisenhower, and Ch. Tintavon Dorian Grey all doing well in the show ring and at stud, while Branckenberry Tong of Cheska, co-owned with Peter Warby, was a very influential sire.

Although Frankie showed frequently in the early years here, taking Ch. Cheska Yangsun & Jesta to their titles as well as creating further sensation by Jesta winning the first BIS for a Lhasa in this country and best opposite sex in show at Sydney Royal in 1973, her interest in Lhasas lay more in breeding and her purchase of the National Dog Newspaper took more and more of her time.

The Sefton's ownership of National Dog saw the paper become the first influential national voice of the dog world, and under Frankie's editorship gave the dog people a say, not only in the show world but also in politics. National Dog's leadership rallied dog owners to fight against harsh and unjust changes to the NSW Dog Act while always reminding the dog people of their responsibilities to the rest of society.

The decision to change National Dog from a broadsheet to a glossy magazine dismayed some, but the magazine went from strength to strength. The company also published specialist magazines for German Shepherd Dogs, Sight Hounds and Terriers. It was mainly owning to ill health that the magazine was sold in 1989.

Frankie's contribution to the dog world also included books on the Pekingese and the Lhasa and she was working on a major breed book at the time of her death. She also held judging licenses for Toys, Terriers, Utility and Non-Sporting and had judged Lhasa Apso Specialties in Sweden, England and the United States as well as General Specials at Santa Barbara (USA).

Both Frankie and Derick's involvement in The Lhasa Apso Club Inc. (NSW) was extensive and continued until they left NSW for Queensland where they bought a boarding kennel and hoped to undertake an extensive breeding program. Unfortunately failing health prevented much activity in this sphere.

Frankie will be greatly missed in the dog world, not only by Lhasa breeders and exhibitors but by the many she influenced by her judging, her writing and her love of dogs.

To Derick and sons Alex, James and Nail we extend our deepest Sympathy.

WATCH FOR HIM! HE REALLY COOKS!
Rub your dog the right way

If you've ever had someone come up behind you and rub your shoulders, chances are it felt wonderful. Massage relieves stress and pain, especially of the head, neck and back. It helps us relax, speeds recovery, curbs pain, and boosts energy and attitude. Massage can produce the same effects in animals.

Michael W. Fox, a veterinarian, behaviorist and author of The Healing Touch, writes: “Since animals are physiologically very similar to human beings, if not identical, and anatomically very similar as well as neurologically, then logic informs us that they should derive very similar benefits from massage therapy as do human beings.”

Research shows that touch is vital for well-being and development, and is essential for bonding. Massage can benefit animals mentally and physically, and it can help pet owners develop a stronger relationship with their animals.

BENEFITS

Regular massage enables pet owners to detect problems early and seek veterinary care before a crisis develops, and it can help animals recover more quickly from illness and surgery; improve circulatory disorders; and relieve pain from such musculoskeletal problems as sprains and hip dysplasia.

Massage can help shy animals become more trusting and calm; it can soothe hyperactive animals; and it can rejuvenate older and chronically ill animals. But most of all, massage feels good.

Muscles tense and tighten when they are stressed, overworked, tired or injured. This tightness causes lactic acid, waste products and toxins to build up in the muscles, causing knots and cramps, and preventing blood from circulating freely. Soon the muscle feels sore.

Massage breaks the "tight and tense" cycle by separating the muscle fibers and breaking up the deposits of excess acid and waste. The light stroking of veins increases the heart rate, while the kneading strokes move the metabolic wastes into the bloodstream for elimination. Massage also releases endorphins (the body's natural pain killers) into the brain and bloodstream. The benefits are increased circulation, relaxation and reduced stress.

TYPES OF MASSAGE

The massage techniques most commonly used with animals are variations of Swedish, shiatsu, deep tissue, acupressure and reflexology. The Swedish method uses long, full strokes to relax the body, and kneading and pounding motions to release toxins. The shiatsu technique involves pressing the fingers along defined paths on the body in a way that is believed to release trapped energy from the muscles. Deep tissue massage employs the same basic techniques as Swedish massage, but the work is performed very slowly and is aimed at reaching the deeper layers of muscle. Practitioners of acupressure and reflexology manipulate pressure points throughout the body that correspond to vital organs and glands. All of these techniques help direct blood flow to different parts of the body to stimulate the heart, bring more oxygen to the muscles and speed the removal of toxins. Generally, a combination of all the techniques is used for pet massage.

HOW TO MASSAGE YOUR DOG

Massaging a dog takes approximately 20 minutes, and the only requirements are loving hands, a soft voice and praise.

A massage is performed from head to tail. Begin by stroking the head, then move to the ears. Caress around the ears in a circular motion. Proceed to the neck area, using a sweeping motion from below the chin to the shoulders. Continue down both sides of the spine to the rump. Roll the dog over and rub the abdomen; then move down the extremities to the feet. Be sure to massage in-between the paw pads.

After a massage, be sure your dog has plenty of water available. Water helps to flush out the toxins released from the muscles.

Despite the benefits of massage, there are some situations in which an animal should never receive a massage. These include fever, shock, extreme debility or heatstroke. Avoid massage if an animal has recently been treated for a fracture, ruptured vertebral disk, sprain, torn muscle or ligament, acute inflammation or swelling, enlarge lymph glands, and cuts or bruises. If your dog has recently had surgery, do not massage around the incision area.

To learn more about pet massage, talk to your veterinarian. Many veterinarians practice some form of massage and recommend it as part of post surgery care. If your veterinarian is unfamiliar with this practice, contact the American Veterinary Holistic Association at (404) 569-0795 for a veterinarian near you, or ask licensed massage therapists in your area for recommendations.

Massage has many benefits, but its most outstanding feature is the time spent cementing the human/animal relationship.

Are your pets covered in your will? If they aren't, they should be.

Discuss with an attorney your state's laws affecting bequests and trusts benefiting a caretaker for your pets after you die. Although many state courts still don't officially honor such provisions, lawyers continue to include them via codicils because putting care provisions in writing makes it more likely that heirs will follow the decedent's wishes - especially when the sum allocated for pet care is a percentage of the estate.

Providing funds for pet care is important. It is naive to assume that our heirs will care as much for our pets as we do and give them sufficient attention however vigorously they now promise to do so. A friend or relative who expects to assume their care may not want to ask for pay, but it is unfair to anyone to carry that burden without some small contribution from the owner. A codicil to your will can state, for example, that a certain sum of money is provided to a certain individual "In consideration of care of any companion animals I may own at the time of my death".

A cautionary word on the subject is offered by trusts and estates attorney Frances Carlisle of New York. She notes that "the trusts or agreements are valid only in so far as the caretaker choose to follow your instructions. The money is theirs; courts will not step in if they want to sell, improperly care for or euthanize the animal."

Certain human societies will agree to support the pet for its life if the decedent established a trust, with the nonprofit agency as remainder beneficiary. Trusts vary with the size, species and number of animals involved. Interest from the trust for a specified number of years goes to the institution for support of the animals; the principal becomes theirs when the pets die.

If you take this route, carefully inspect where your pets would be kept. Some agencies that promise lifetime pet care are disgracefully inadequate.

For purebreds, "rescue services" that find homes for dogs - and to a somewhat lesser degree, cats and horses - are a recent phenomenon. Since they constantly check local shelters, ask managers there how to find the rescue groups for advice on how safely to arrange for your pets' future care.

I have found that most rescue services connected with breed clubs are enormously responsible. They thoroughly investigate before and follow up after placement in new homes. If you have a purebred, including a bequest or trust for such a group in your will and trusting it to find your animal a home, might well be the best course of action.

PROPOSED RULE CHANGES

A proposed AKC rule change will be voted on at the March Delegates meeting in New York.

Current Rule: No dog or litter out of a dam under 8 months or over 12 years of age at time of mating, or by a sire under 7 months or over 12 years of age at time of mating, will be registered unless the application for registration shall be accompanied by an affidavit or evidence which shall prove the fact to the satisfaction of AKC.

Proposed Rule Change: No dog or litter out of a dam under 12 months or over 8 years of age at time of mating, or by a sire under 9 months or over 12 years of age at time of mating, will be registered. Further, no more than 6 litters will be registered out of any dam registered with the AKC.

(Ch. Chalin's Royal Squire X Ch. Chalin's Sparkling Sherry ROM elig)

“Penny” as she is known, is pictured being awarded BISS at the National Capital Area Lhasa Apso Club by the very well known and respected breeder judge Stephen Campbell. Penny was expertly handled and presented by her friend Nancy Plunkett for this outstanding and noteworthy win. This show was held in conjunction with the National Speciality in July 1993. The competition was fierce with many beautiful typey lhassas being shown including several multiple BISS and BIS lhassas. Thank you Mr. Campbell for awarding Penny this big win and thank you Nancy for handling Penny like she was a piece of fine china (which she is).

Penny will be bred over the winter break. I am looking forward to the day when she can be in the brood bitch class with her kids. That will be tons of fun providing Penny and mother nature cooperates.

This was our lucky day. Joy is shown being awarded WB and BOS by Mr. Don Rogers. We are so proud of Joy. She is a wonderful bitch with an excellent personality. The few times she was shown this year, she was full of herself. She has decided that going to dog shows is great fun. Thank you Mr. Rogers for making our day. Joy will be back out after the winter break. She has seven points including a major to her credit. T.J. and Joy are littermates and both have been fun to show. When these two kids attain their championship, I will be eligible for my breeder ROM and Sherry will have five champion kids to her credit. Isn't that something?!?. 1994 should be the big year for ChaLin.

A GUIDE TO PROPER PUPPY NUTRITION

How to make sure your puppy's diet is balanced and complete.

by Thomas Ryan, DVM

You are what you eat. Well, puppies are what they eat, too. But the wide variety of foods on the market, with their claims and counterclaims, is enough to boggle the new dog owner's mind. Which one is the best? Are there real differences between one brand and another? To make matters more complicated, it isn't even a simple choice of brands these days. Now there are different formulations within each brand for dogs' varying needs.

Put briefly, an adequate diet must be of sufficient quantity and quality, and contain the proper amount of protein, fat and carbohydrates as well as vitamins and minerals. If even one element is missing from a dog's diet, it is no longer adequate for proper growth, maintenance and health. If you are aware of a few key nutritional issues, primarily a dog food's nutritional value, its digestibility and your dog's taste preference, you'll have an easier time making an informed choice at the grocery or pet-supply store.

Varying needs. A puppy, a nursing mother, a sedentary apartment-bound dog and a geriatric dog will have different nutritional needs. Whereas most dog foods are formulated for an average adult dog, certain conditions such as immaturity, pregnancy or disease change the equation, and the diet for the average adult dog then becomes inadequate or excessive.

A dog's breed and size also determine its nutritional needs. As you can well imagine, a Chihuahua and a St. Bernard are going to have very different requirements. The Chihuahua, because of its small size, will need more energy (calories) per pound of body weight than will its king-size cousin.

Puppy food, as a rule, has a higher per-pound ratio of protein, calcium and phosphorus than adult dog food. Most puppies are in constant motion - playing, playing and more playing. It's easy to see why they would require about twice the energy and protein of adult dogs.

Examining dog-food labels is a good place to start when deciding on the right food for your pet. The information provided on pet-food labels is regulated by the Food and Drug Administration, the Department of Agriculture and the Federal Trade Commission in conjunction with local state authorities. These groups together comprise the Association of American Feed Control Officials.

The label on your dog's food must contain the brand name, the product name (i.e. beef dinner) and a clear indication of what type of animal the food is intended for. In addition, the information panel must include a nutrition statement, an ingredient list and a guaranteed analysis. The nutrition statement lets you know whether the food is considered a complete and balanced diet or intended only for supplemental feeding.

Ingredients are listed on the label in descending order by weight. For example, if a label reads: "Corn, soybean meal, beef by-products, water, poultry meal..." then the principal ingredients in the food are corn, then soybean meal, then beef by-products, and so on. Flavorings and preservatives are often added to dog food, as are colorings.

The guaranteed analysis statement is probably the most important part of a dog-food label. This analysis must indicate the minimum amount of crude protein and crude fat contained in the food, as well as the maximum amount of crude fiber and moisture. Let's look at part of a hypothetical label from a can of dog food to determine what this analysis really means.
PROPER PUPPY NUTRITION

Crude Protein ........... 12%
Crude Fat ............... 6%
Crude Fiber ............. 1.5%
Moisture ................. 76.5%

Crude protein indicates the nitrogen content of the product as determined chemically, it does not identify the quality of the protein, its amino acid balance or how well it can be digested by your dog. Because protein is often the most expensive ingredient in dog food, it can be of low quality.

Crude fat, chemically speaking is that part of food that is soluble in ether. Fat contains 2.25 times the calories as the same amount of protein or carbohydrates.

Crude fiber is the mount of indigestible material in the food and is usually highest in those foods that contain a high percentage of plant products, i.e. corn or soybeans.

The moisture level in food simply refers to the amount of water it contains. In the example above, the product is approximately three-quarters water and one quarter food items.

Keep in mind that the term "crude" preceding protein, fat and fiber is a chemical analysis; it does not mean that, in the example given above, your dog will get 12% of its protein. Generally speaking, dogs will digest food of animal origin better than that of plant origin. Look for an animal-origin item as the first or second item on the ingredient section of the label when shopping for a dog food.

It's in the Bag (or Can or Plastic). Dog foods are generally divided into three groups: dry, canned and semi-moist. The categories vary in cost, palatability and the amount of nutrition delivered per serving.

Dry dog foods usually contain 16% to 27% protein, 7% to 12% fat, 35% to 50% carbohydrates and less than 12% moisture. Dry food can play an important part in your dog's dental health. When a dog chews, the dry food particles act in much the same way as a toothbrush, scraping against the teeth to help reduce plaque and tarter build-up.

Canned dog foods usually contain between 8% to 15% protein and 2% to 10% fat. Because they are the highest in moisture content, dogs on a canned-food diet consume two to three times more volume than those on a dry-food diet.

Semi-moist dog foods are about 25% moisture. While slightly more expensive than dry foods, semi-moist diets offer high palatability and convenience.

Each food has its advantages and disadvantages. Dry foods are cheaper that the other kinds. They can be left out in a bowl and will not spoil, require no refrigeration and help reduce dental tartar. Canned foods are usually the most palatable (and most expensive), will spoil or dry out rapidly and do not promote healthy teeth and gums. The semi-moist foods fall right in between dry and canned. Like canned foods, the semi-moist products do not promote healthy teeth or gums.

Generic vs. Brand Name Foods. As you walk down the dog-food aisle at your grocery store, you'll likely be drawn to the attractive price tags of the generic products on the shelves. Think twice before opting for one of these. The adage "You get what you pay for" applies in this case. In one study of randomly collected generic dry dog foods, more than 50% failed to meet their own labeled guaranteed analysis. While it can be assumed the remaining generic foods were nutritionally adequate, there is really no way you can be sure which ones make the grade. For this reason, it is important to give your dog a food you can feel confident will be meeting its nutritional needs.

Every dog owner will be tempted from time to time to supplement his dog's diet with the occasional table scrap. Although, table scraps in moderation are generally not harmful, you should try to avoid this form of supplementation. Table scraps are nutritionally incomplete and unbalanced, and they increase calorie intake and may contribute to obesity. Furthermore, offering table scraps on a regular basis may contribute to the behavioral problems of finicky eating or incorrigible begging.

Nutrition is one key to a long and healthful life for people and pets alike. Ensure that your puppy grows into a healthy, happy dog by choosing its food as carefully as you would choose your own.
