International Best In Show Champion
Tn Hi Brick The Big Bang
Brick was shown by his owner, Sylvia at the German International All Breed Show against the strongest competition in Europe. He won his Deutsch title by taking Group 1 over 1,600 dogs in the group and then went on to reserve Best In Show with a total entry of 6,000 dogs.

Brick was also Group Winner and 4 Best In Show at the International Belgium and Reserve BIS at the International Barcelona Spain Show. With limited showing, Brick has proven the quality of American Lhasas throughout the world. We congratulate his grandson Australian Ch Tn Hi Dangerous Moment, owner handled by Lyn Hirst.

Dear ALAC Member:

You should be receiving your BULLETIN just as you are about to depart for the National or maybe you'll see it upon arrival in San Francisco. This year our National is the first one hosted by the ALAC Show Committee. I would personally like to thank all the Committee members who have dedicated so much time and energy into making the show the huge success I know it is going to be. I look forward to our first National Sweepstakes as well as our first Grand Futurity Run-off. I hope that all the regional winners are able to make the trip, which should make the run-off even more exciting. It's important that we all support these events and if any members have ideas or suggestions that they feel will improve our National in any way, please let me know. Also, as I have asked many times before, if you want to be involved, please let me know. We can always use help.

I was very pleased to learn that the membership accepted the slate of Officers and Board Members that were nominated by the Nominating Committee. I sincerely believe that the Board works well together with independent, intelligent ideas and goals. It's especially rewarding when the membership concurs.

I look forward to seeing everyone in California and wish all members a successful Specialty.

Until next time,

Steve Campbell
ALAC President

The Star Producers System was developed through the research we did while writing our book, THE COMPLETE LHASA APSO, in order to rate the producing ability of sires and dams in our breed. It was first published in March, 1981 in the breed magazine LHASA TALES.

The Star producers System includes all producers with the qualifying number of champion offspring. It is not intended to compete with the ROM (Register of Merit) System of the American Lhasa Apso Club, Inc., but to make additional information known about those dogs and bitches who are not entitled to included ROM after their names. Some reasons for a Lhasa Apso not being entitled to have an ROM added to his name may be that the owner is not a member of ALAC, or is a member but has not applied for the title, or the owner of the qualified Lhasa was retired or deceased before the ROM system was established in 1973.

Benitez/Wilks Fund

The ALAC Support Fund

This fund was originally established by Raena Wilks in 1983 to help ALAC charter officer and member Dorothy Benitez who was destitute and dying from cancer.

The next need for the fund was in 1984 when the Chenoweth home and kennel facility burned and their needs were helped by our Benitez Assistance Fund.

In 1986 on their way to the ALAC National Specialty from Colorado to California in a motor home, ALAC member Greg and Marion Brake, experienced a fire in this vehicle losing several dogs and all their belongings. The Benitez fund came to their aid by paying for their lodging in California.

Raena Wilks was distressed because members did not respond to her requests to replenish this depleted fund and in 1988 requested that it be suspended which it was until the ALAC board of Directors reestablished it in 1992 by advancing the fund $500 and requesting that the ALAC treasurer set aside all monies donated to the fund to reimburse the ALAC general fund and build up the Assistance Fund.

In 1992 Michael Santora and Alan Loso were the next ALAC members to receive assistance when it was known that they had sustained major hurricane damage.

Contributions totalling $179.00 were received in 1992 from Barbara Wood and Norman & Carolyn Herbel.

The next request for aid ironically was a request for aid to help with laying to rest our ALAC member Raena Wilks who had originally established the Assistance Fund. This request left the fund in the red $320.

At the July 5, 1993 ALAC Board meeting the name of the Dorothy Benitez Membership Assistance Fund was changed to the Benitez/Wilks Fund.

At the 1993 National Specialty one Lhasa Game was played for the fund and made $185.

Contributions additionally have been bade by the following:

These contributions amounted to 605.00 leaving a balance of 285.00 in the fund and an outstanding $500.00 still owned to the ALAC General fund which means that the fund is still in the red in the amount of $215.00.

All contributions will be greatly appreciated by all those that may need our help in the future.

Please send your donations clearly marked for the Benitez/Wilks fund to the ALAC Treasurer, Carolyn Herbel, Route 1, Box 50, Putnam, Oklahoma 73659.
Daisy . . . Finish?
When Pigs Fly!!!

In Daisy's case, though, pigs "fly" on a daily basis. Fortunately, she was able to take time out from her schedule and her 182 squeaky pigs for those last two majors. We would like to thank Rex Irwin (shown below with Daisy) for letting her take over his house with her travel pigs, and swat them, flip them and hide them to her heart's content. (She does get kind of annoying after several hours!!!!)

Thanks also goes to Judge Don Rogers (shown below with Rex and Daisy) and Judge Frank Wolaniuk for rewarding this darling little girl with two majors.

WHAT LEGACY ARE YOU LEAVING TO THE BREED?

As a breeder or an owner, haven't you wished you knew more about the dogs behind your lines? How many times has some fault or virtue cropped up leaving you wondering where that came from? Mostly these are little things that may surprise us at the time but they are not devastating.

Now consider what could happen to your own breeding program if your foundation bitch or stud dog was discovered to have crippling hip dysplasia at the age of 6 years? More than likely you are now two or three generations away from that dog and may have line bred on him or her. Was the dog used at public stud? How many puppies are out there with hip dysplasia? Have other breeders unknowingly added this to their own lines by using your stud or purchasing puppies from you?? Are you prepared to start over?

Actually, I saw this happen to a fellow breeder. Breeder "A" purchased a pointed adult dog from successful, well-known Show Breeder "B". The dog was shown to his AKC championship and bred several times. When the dog was five years old, Breeder A noticed that he wasn't as lively as he used to be but thought it was just laziness. This progressed until one day the dog wouldn't get up to cross the kennel. Thinking the dog had injured himself, she took him into her veterinarian.

Not being able to find any injuries, the veterinarian suggested spine and hip x-rays. Much to their surprise, the hip x-rays showed the worst set of hips that the radiographic specialist had ever seen on any size dog! By this time, Breeder A had already purchased and bred several brood bitches from Breeder B. All these dogs and their available off-spring were then x-rayed. One of the brood bitches was dysplastic as were several young dogs out of the original dysplastic Champion Lhasa Apso.

Yes, hip dysplasia is out there, and it is in Lhasa Apso show and pet lines. We are not facing a major problem at this time, but we cannot continue to ignore it. As of January 1, 1994, a total of 543 Lhasas had been evaluated by the Orthopedic Foundation for Animals (OFA). Of these, 8.6% were dysplastic. That's not quite 1 in 10. However, these figures are misleading because a large percentage of x-rays that show evidence of hip dysplasia are not submitted to OFA.

Could this happen to you? The answer is Yes! What can you do to protect your breeding program?

- Have your dogs x-rayed and cleared for hip dysplasia.
- Breed to OFA registered stock when possible.
- Encourage others to x-ray.
- Check hips before you buy.

It is not a great deal of trouble or cost when you consider what could happen if crippling hip dysplasia turns up in your bloodlines. The question is, can you afford not to x-ray?

Hip x-rays can be evaluated at any time, but only those taken after the dog reaches 2 years old may qualify for an OFA breed registry number. Preliminary evaluations of younger dogs are offered, but if you want an OFA number, a new x-ray will have to be taken and submitted after the dog is 2 years old. OFA does not require that the dog be anesthetized for the x-ray. This decision is left up to the veterinarian. It is suggested that OFA x-rays not be taken when bitches are in season, pregnant, or in false pregnancy.

All submitted x-rays are first judged on quality and clarity. If the x-ray quality is not suitable, it is immediately returned to the veterinarian. Accepted x-rays are then independently evaluated by three radiologists. Owners and veterinarians are notified by mail within 3 to 6 weeks.

Your OFA report will list one of seven categories:

1. Excellent Hip Joint Conformation:
   Superior hip joint conformation as compared with other individuals of the same breed and age. (10.1% of the Lhasas evaluated.*)

2. Good Hip Joint Conformation:
   Well formed hip joint conformation as compared with other individuals of the same breed and age. (61.4% of the Lhasas evaluated.*)

3. Fair Hip Joint Conformation:
   Minor irregularities of hip joint conformation as compared with other individuals of the same breed and age. (19.9% of the Lhasas evaluated.*)

4. Borderline Hip Joint Conformation:
   Marginal hip joint conformation of indeterminate status with respect to hip dysplasia at this time. A repeat study is recommended in 6-8 months. (0.4% of the Lhasas evaluated.*)

5. Mild Hip Dysplasia:
   Radiographic evidence of minor dysplastic changes of the hip joints. (5.2% of the Lhasas evaluated.*)

6. Moderate Hip Dysplasia:
   Well defined radiographic evidence of dysplastic changes of the hip joints. (2.4% of the Lhasas evaluated.*)

7. Severe Hip Dysplasia:
   Well defined radiographic evidence of marked dysplastic changes of the hip joints. (0.6% of the Lhasas evaluated.*)

(*As of January 1, 1994)

Because of the obvious differences between breeds, x-rays are compared to others of the same breed at the same age. Only those rated in the first three categories are considered normal and will receive an OFA breed registry number. If the x-rays do not pass, OFA notifies only the veterinarian and the dog's owner. The x-rays themselves are no longer kept on file, but the images are captured electronically and stored on optical disks.

OFA now releases to the AKC listings of dogs that receive registry numbers and they are published quarterly in the AKC AWARDS Publication. They are also part of the sire's and dam's information printed on the blue AKC puppy registration applications, the individual AKC registration certificates, and the AKC certified pedigrees.

Hip dysplasia will not be controlled by veterinarians, the AKC, or OFA. All the x-rays in the world will not eliminate it. The breeder alone is responsible for choosing the dogs that are to be bred. Clear your own dogs and start asking stud owners for OFA certification. Prevention is far wiser and cheaper than the consequences. Make the responsible decision - think of the legacy you are passing on to future generations of breeders. When it comes to hip dysplasia, ignorance is not bliss...it's a time bomb waiting to explode.

Obedient Lhasas

This will be the first of a series of articles on obedience that Steve and I hope will encourage more people to train their dogs to respond to and obey some basic commands, such as the down-stay and the emergency recall. We feel teaching a few basic commands builds a foundation for the future happiness of your Lhasa and your relationship; be it as home companion, conformation dog or obedience competitor. Steve and I have three Lhasas with CDX’s, one of which is a champion.

The following is the story of my first, a straight Hamilton red Lhasa named Gaby:

Beginnings

Our introduction to dog shows really came when we decided to train Gaby in obedience. Our lives have not been the same since. Gaby Plauget CDX has always been high-strung and very attentive to the world around her. She is also very chary of strangers. At the young age of 7 months, we decided to enroll her in obedience class at our local community college. We hoped to socialize her to other dogs and people and help her settle down. There were about 50 people -plus dogs- in that class; which is way too many for one teacher. Luckily, as always happens, the class shrunk quickly. Our instructor was the "force-type" trainer that used to be common 7 years ago. Basically, we marched up and down the parking lot, teaching the dog to heel by our left side. We jerked our dogs forward if they lagged or jerked them back if they forged. With so many dogs, it was quite a circus. This is really a bad way to teach a Lhasa, or any other dog for that matter! My worst experience with this class was a dachshund that was hung by its' choke collar, by the instructor, until it quit barking. Needless to say, they owners of the dog never returned.

Despite this beginning, Gaby and I persisted. Like every Lhasa that I have trained, Gaby learned very quickly and went straight to the top of the class early. Unfortunately, they get bored just as quickly, and then they get creative. The force training does work; though, in a manner of speaking, you pay a price! Gaby began lagging, with her tail down, wondering what was going to go wrong next. Luckily, she was very forgiving, and I had enough sense to realize that constant corrections were not working for her. As obedience did help her settle down and become more social with other dogs and people; I was encouraged enough, to join an advanced class with a private instructor.

Onward

Thus began our formal training for actual competition. We enrolled in a class taught by a lady who showed golden retrievers. This was our first experience with prejudice against certain breeds; especially small, furry ones, who don't fit the classic "obedience mold". Gaby and I, along with the other two small dogs, were shuffled off in a corner where we received minimal attention. Despite this, we managed to learn; sometimes faster than the Goldens! This class was a revelation though; as we were encouraged to use any method -that worked- to get our dogs to perform correctly. It is much more fun for everyone if you are praising, instead of reprimanding, all of the time. What worked for Gaby was: food, playing with toys, and tons of praise.

Fun and Games

Obedience is a constant challenge; even more so with a smart Lhasa Apso. You always have to be one step ahead of them or all is lost. Some of the training hints that worked for me were: don't do heeling exercises for more than five minutes at a time; train between classes only once or twice a week, only do an exercise a few times and stop when they do it correctly (none of this "one more for good measure"), and end your training with playing or a fun walk or whatever they love most.

By the end of the class, Gaby was working with her tail up and was terribly pleased with herself. After each exercise that she did correctly, she would promptly sneeze and bow her head. She always knew! Learning to read your dogs body language is one of the great things about obedience training; but, the biggest reward is the close relationship that develops.

Gaby was finally ready for competition! I will never forget our first time in the ring in Muskogee, Oklahoma. I was shaking so hard, I could hardly walk straight. The judge was very nice and really helped me to relax. I will never forget his face; he really made it a lot easier. When we won first place, with a 193 out of 200, I was so stunned that I burst into tears; much to my embarrassment now. Gaby went on to get her CD in three shows without ever busting. Our only problem was the stand for exam. Gaby, true to her heritage, loathed being touched by strangers. When the judge would come up to her, I would start sweating and Gaby’s skin would crawl when he went over her, but she never moved!

With this success, we moved on to Open work. True to form, Gaby learned everything first in her class. She loved jumping and retrieving, it was a wonderful game for her. In fact, she loved the dumbbell so much, that I had to restrain her from taking all of the other dog’s dumbbells. It was quite comical to see her dragging a huge dumbbell meant for the golden retriever! She could be very quick.

In a relatively short time, we were in the Open ring. She got her first leg, first time out. I thought we were in for a repeat performance. Open work is full of surprises. This is when the dog starts working away from you and it doesn’t take long before they figure out what they have to do and what they don’t have to do. In other words, Gaby decided she knew more than I did! She loved heeling, jumping and retrieving, but why did she have to sit for three minutes when I wasn’t even around. Good time to take a nap! Eight shows later, she’s ringwise and breaking the sit stay all the time. In class, she does it perfectly. We never can fool her into laying down so we can correct her. She even does 10 minute sit stays and never moves a paw! What frustration!

So Close........

One show she was actually 30 seconds from a flawless sit stay when someone dropped a trash barrel. Gaby jumped straight up and forward three feet into a perfect sit. That is where I found her when I got back. If any other dog had moved, we could have done it over, but, no luck. This was one instance when Gaby’s sensitivity to sound was her downfall.

She did get her CDX in 12 shows with scores all in the 190s, but it sure did teach me a little humility. We learned a lot together. We formed a bond where I felt we were communicating on a level all our own. Obedience has been one of the most rewarding things I have ever done. We have taught basic obedience to all of our dogs, including the 14 year old, who had no problem learning, by-the-way. She loves the attention and those special goodies. We make it a game where the dog is the center of attention doing something the know pleases us and in the end, pleases them. In fact they all beg to be the next one to “do their thing.”

Sum of the Parts

If you have never tried obedience, it is well worth the time. It certainly gives you a different perspective on dogs, and Lhasa Apsos in particular. I know I appreciate the uniqueness of each of our dogs. No two work exactly the same. In the end, the joy is doing it together that makes you both happy. If it turns into a chore, you -- as the leader --are doing something wrong. Lhasas are so smart and devoted, that you will appreciate even more their wonderful heritage.

What to expect when an AKC inspector comes to your door.

Most breeders would prefer not to have to deal with an AKC inspector. For some, it's the anticipation of the unknown that instills anxiety; for others it's a fear of the aftermath. But what do AKC inspectors actually do when they come knocking?

First, kennel inspections are routine events that do not target specific groups or individuals. Before 1991 inspections were conducted after complaints were received by the AKC, but now everyone using the AKC's registry service is subject to inspection. The system, which was once called "reactive," is now termed "proactive," meaning inspectors are visiting the kennels of all individuals registering dogs with the AKC to determine if they are in compliance with the AKC's rules and regulations on record keeping and identification.

Although the department's inspections policies have not changed since 1957, the number of kennels inspected has increased tremendously over the last five years, according to Investigator Donald Sturz. "Now we often return for routine inspections within a year or two of the last inspection," he says.

Why would the AKC want to inspect your kennel? The primary reason is to protect the integrity of the AKC registry. By checking actual breeding stock against the corresponding paperwork, the AKC can verify the purity of the stock, thus helping to safeguard the registry. To accomplish this, all breeders must maintain their records in compliance with AKC requirements, so that anyone inspecting a kennel can correctly identify their dogs without assistance.

Says AKC's newly appointed Director of Investigations and Inspections, William R. Hughes, "One of our goals is to keep the Stud Book as pure as possible. We're here to help the breeder."

It is also the AKC's objective to make sure all dogs in kennels are housed properly and receive good care. High standards in kennel maintenance are particularly important in this time of anti-breeder legislation. The proper maintenance of kennels will help responsible breeders continue to maintain kennels without legal restrictions.

The AKC Investigations are Inspections department has its home office in New York. Hughes oversees a department consisting of two investigators—Sturz and Robert Hufford—and a team of AKC inspectors who are stationed throughout the country. The investigators are given specific assignments based on complaints about a given kennel or individual, while the inspectors conduct routine inspections.

What Happens In An Inspection

When an inspector visits a kennel, they will first introduce themselves and present their AKC identification. They will then explain that they are conducting a routine inspection of the record-keeping and identification procedures and that they're determining compliance with the AKC's rules and regulations. The inspector will begin by asking the kennel owner or manager basic questions regarding the kennel's size and operation.

A routine inspection can last from 30 minutes to two hours, according to Sturz; an in-dept inspection (usually a reinspection) can exceed three hours. After the basic questions are answered, the inspector will accompany the kennel owner on a tour of the kennel. This walk-through helps the inspector determine the approximate size of the kennel, the number of breeds and the identification on the dogs. The inspector will also note the care and condition of the dogs and the facilities.

Identification requirements are as follows:

- Each dog in a kennel must have its own unique identifier.
- The identification must be on the actual dog. Photo, drawings, nose prints, names on crates or a kennel owner's knowledge of his dogs are not acceptable.
- Tags, tattoos or a microchip implant are all acceptable forms of identification. If a microchip is used, there must be an on-site scanner to verify identification.
- The identification on the dog must correspond to the kennel owner's written record of that dog, so there is no question as to which AKC papers and records go with a particular dog.

During the walk-through an inspector will want to see that bitches in season are maintained separately from the males, so that no doubt exists as to the identity of a sire of any litter. Puppies from different litters must be segregated or identified, so there can be no doubt as to the parents or age of a particular puppy.

Throughout the walk-through, the inspector will randomly select dogs and ask to see their identification. If a kennel maintains more than one breed, the inspector will select a random number from each of the breeds represented. All information collected by the inspector will later be checked against the kennel owner's records to determine its accuracy.

Keeping Good Records

In addition to being accurate and well-maintained, it is important that all kennel records be understood by anyone reading them—without the kennel owner's assistance. This provides a reference for registration or transfer applications that have been made or that may be made later to the AKC. Also, the lineage of all purebred dogs can be immediately determined upon inspection.

The AKC provides forms for keeping written records that include spaces for all the necessary information. Kennel owners can devise their own systems, but they must include all the information required in the AKC's forms. According to Hughes, "A significant number of breeders are adopting AKC forms for their record keeping because it's the easiest way to make sure all the information is there." The forms can be ordered from the Customer Service department at (919) 233-9767, and may be photocopied as needed.

Records must be kept whenever a dog is acquired or delivered, and at the time of mating, whelping or death. Records on each dog should be saved for five years if a dog has died, is sold or given away, in case questions arise as to the lineage of puppies from that dog.

There are several types of records inspectors look at: ownership records, breeding records, litter records and records of dogs acquired from others for resale. The records should contain the following information:

- Ownership records, including the dog's breed, registered name and number (or litter registration number if not individually registered yet); sex; color and markings; date of birth; names and numbers of sire and dam; name of breeder; name and address of person from whom directly acquired; date of acquisition; date dog is sold, given away or dies; name and address of person to whom the dog is directly sold or delivered; kind of papers and date supplied. You need these records for dogs you co-own, as well.

- Breeding records, including date of mating; names of persons handling mating; registered name and number of dog to whom mated; name and address of its owner.

- Litter records, which chronicle date of whelping; number of puppies whelped; sex, color and markings; litter registration number; date of sale, gift or death of each puppy; name and address of person acquiring each puppy; kind of papers and date supplied; registered name and number of each puppy registered by breeder.

- Records on dogs acquired from others for resale. This type of record usually applies to dog brokers and petshops; however, it also applies to individuals getting a puppy back or who have a stud dog puppy agreement. The AKC provides a form that requires the same information as the litter form, in addition to the name of address of the person from whom the dog was acquired.

Rectifying A Problem

Following an inspection, the inspector will discuss any problems with the kennel owner and provide a written report stating the nature of the problems that need rectifying. If an inspector should find a kennel does not comply with the proper record keeping and identification rules, he or she will notify the AKC's New York office, which will send a warning letter to the kennel owner. The owner then has a specified time during which they must rectify the problems.

Within that time period the owner must request a reinspection in writing. When the inspector returns to the kennel for a reinspection, if the owner still does not comply, then their right to continue using AKC registration services will be reconsidered by the AKC's Privileges Committee.

There are other, more immediate actions an inspector may recommend. The final decision on these is made by the Privileges Committee. Generally, they are reserved for more serious infractions.

AKC inspectors never seize dogs or issue fines to kennel owners. However, the Board of Directors may elect to levy fines. If an inspector should find the conditions in the kennel are cruel, inhumane or unsanitary, they will notify the AKC, which will contact the USDA and animal control offices in the kennel's region. If the kennel is convicted of cruelty, its AKC registration privileges will be suspended by the AKC Board of Directors.

The USDA also conducts kennel inspections, and has its own rules about the conditions under which dogs may be kept in a kennel. Unlike the AKC, the USDA can issue or revoke a kennel's license to operate. It can also file charges against a kennel.

For the most part, the inspections process is a friendly interaction between inspector and kennel owner. Says Hughes, "When we first get there people are usually guarded and defensive, but once we explain what we're there to do, most people become more cooperative. We're not looking for this to be a punitive process. We want it to be educational."

Memories

I have been asked to write about four friends we have lost in the last seven months. Perhaps you will indulge me as I wander through my memories and share my muses of each of these dedicated Lhasa Apso people.

Raena Wilks, an ALAC member since 1961, died in July 1993. She loved the breed with a passion and served the club in many ways. She was the coordinator of our annual meeting and awards banquet when they were held in New York City at Westminster time. A resident of the Big Apple, Raena masterminded these wonderful parties. I have very fond memories of the camaraderie we all shared because of our hostess' graciousness. Raena did not drive but relied on friends to transport her to the shows; therefore, it was a great disappointment to her when the annual functions were moved to be held in conjunctions with the annual roving specialty.

Raena also served as the ALAC's membership chair. Typically, she rallied around charter officer Dorothy Benitez when Dorothy was destitute and dying of cancer by establishing the Dorothy Benitez Assistance Fund to help her. She later continued it to honor Dorothy and provide help to other members in need. In July the board of directors changed the name to the Benitez-Wilks Fund in honor of both ladies.

We lost two world-renowned Lhasa ladies in November 1993, Patricia Chenoweth and Frances Sefton. Chen Lhasa Apsos started in 1959. For 34 years Pat lived with her Lhasa Apsos as companions first, but as a breeder never lost sight of her responsibility to breed type. Even when the kennel in Saratoga burned and many of her top-winning and top-producing dogs and a lifetime of records were lost in 1984, she seemed to gather strength from the dogs that survived and the concern of friends. With this strength the Chenoweths regrouped and, although on a smaller basis, continued their commitment to the breed until her death.

When I conjure up memories of Pat, I remember fondly her arrival at dog shows. She would drive up with several Lhasa Apsos happily running loose in the car, delighted to be at the show with "Mom." She was always prepared. I remember one Westminster when the ALAC sponsored a membership drive in the benching area. When it came time to put up the display, none of the East Coast people had any tools but Pat had scissors, tacks, a stapler and even poster board, which she had brought all the way from California along with several dogs and all their necessities.

Pat enjoyed sharing the antics of her dogs by writing stories about them such as "Panda Bear Tree," many of which were published in various magazines. She and her husband Thomas wrote the first book about Lhasa Apsos, How to Raise and Train Your Lhasa Apso, published in 1965 by T.F.H.

Pat, an ALAC member since 1970, served us in many ways over the years, most recently as author of this column.

Within 36 hours after hearing about Pat, I was notified that our Lhasa Apso friend and ALAC member from Australia, Frances Sefton, had lost her battle with cancer.

The author of the second Lhasa Apso book, The Lhasa Apso, published in 1970, Frances is universally recognized as an authority on the breed. She judged in this country in 1989 and we were honored to have this authority in our midst.

Frances' Cheska Lhasa Apsos were successful both in Great Britain, where her breeding program originated, and later down under after the Seftons emigrated to Australia.

In January 1994 we lost Robert E. Schrank, Jr., after an extended illness. Bob's courage commanded love and respect from all who knew him. He had been an ALAC member since 1989, and although he was not as deeply involved for as long as the others, he truly loved the breed.

Bob's naivete allowed him to see beyond the trivial and straight ahead to the heart. I remember how pleased he was with his first winner and the first puppies she had. It was such fun to see his newfound enjoyment. He was good for the breed.

We will miss these friends, but they are not gone. All we have to do is look into the faces of our Lhasas to see the contributions these friends made on their behalf or call on our memories, and the happy times spent with out friends are there to be enjoyed again. Thank you God for the blessing of having known Raena, Pat, Frances, and Bob and for the blessing of memory that allows us to enjoy our friends forever.

1994 ALAC SPECIALTY TAPES

We will be taping the ALAC LHASA APSO SPECIALTY show that will be held on June 15th in San Francisco, California. This year’s Specialty Judge is the noted Breeder-Judge Mrs. Marianne Nixon. The Grand Futurity judge will be Beverly Drake.

We will be taping, this year only the ALAC specialty and the Grand Futurity. There will be no taping of the Sweeps, Obedience or the LACNC Specialty. Taping a National Specialty is a very grueling task and we are therefore limiting our taping this year to the last three days.

We anticipate that there will be a total of 3 tapes for the show. We are providing complete sets of the ALAC show for the same $60 price as last year. The tapes will be Grand Futurity & Dog classes for Tape 1, Bitches for Tape 2 and Specials, Best of Breed, Brace, Hall of Fame & Stud & Brood Bitch competition on Tape 3. Individual tapes are still $25.00 each plus postage.

As usual we will have a complete commentary for every dog in the ring. Commentary is provided by well known Lhasa exhibitors.

SPECIAL NOTICE: As in past years we will be donating 10% of the gross sales of the ALAC Specialty tape sales for the 1995 Trophy Fund.

You can order individual or tape set today by filling in the coupon below. Please enclose your check or charge your VISA, MASTERCARD or AMEX. For ADVANCE orders there will be no charge for shipping. After June 15th include postage of $3.00 for one tape, or $4.00 for two tapes and $5.00 for three tapes. Since a complete set takes 6 hours to reproduce, orders will be filled on the basis of the earliest orders received. Please allow at least one week for delivery. All tapes will be sent U.S. Priority Mail.
